

Board to consider recommendations

Kings Mountain Board of Education members said Thursday at a special meeting they would consider recommendations by a Task Force on minority hiring.

The board will take a look at employing a full-time Human Resource person to recruit minorities and implement Project Teach and career planning programs at the Middle School.

Valerie Boyd, chairman of the 13-member study committee, said Project Teach is a priority and she's hopeful the program can be implemented by the first of the year.

"Project Teach would enable us to grow our own teachers by encouraging students at the middle school to go to college and return home to teach in Kings Mountain," she said in her presentation.

Goal No. 3 of the Board of Education is to develop and implement a plan which aggressively pursues the recruitment and employment of qualified individuals from minority races for positions in the school system which require certification." Mary Accor, Paul Brintley,

Rev. C. A. Feemster and Margaret Smith presented the various goals that the committee is emphasizing. In addition to employment of a human resources staff member, they encouraged the production of a quality video and portfolio to showcase the system and community; implementation of Career Day for prospective employees; providing resources for lateral entry employees to assist them with strategies for taking and passing the National
