Mixed reaction locally to Clinton's acquittal

BY ALAN HODGE Staff Writer

Now that the impeachment trial of President Clinton has come to a conclusion, the nation can draw a collective breath and take stock of what has gone on these past months. Opinions on the acquittal of Clinton are about as strong one way or another as those of whether Jeff Gordon or Dale Earnhardt is the better driver. A sampling of folks in the Kings Mountain area found a diversity of opinions, none of them lukewarm in Kings Mountain attorney Micky Corry looked at the impeachment from a professional point of view.

Being a lawyer, I knew that the burden of proof would fall on those seeking an impeachment conviction," said Corry. "I couldn't see how they could find him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.'

An educator at Kings Mountain High School, Betsy Wells was relieved but troubled by the whole Clinton impeachment episode.

"I'm glad it's over," said Wells. "It's nice to know that the Constitution prevailed and that the way our forefathers wrote it did not overturn the outcome of two popular elections. I never thought the charges rose to impeachable offenses, but I am bothered by the rancor and bitterness that came about. It is a national catastrophe."

Dean Westmoreland of Grover also praised the founders of our nation.

"The outcome was about what I expected, Westmoreland said. "I never believed the House had a case. The Senate bore that out by not even getting a majority to vote against the President. I'm proud that the system worked as our forefathers planned it so that partisan removal of a president was hard to do."

Kings Mountain City Council member Gene White thought that Clinton's conduct was "crazy" but saw the Constitution as a buffer. "The founding fathers wrote our Constitution in a way that made impeachment hard to carry out in order to avoid political vendettas," White said. "The process should be carried out only with crimes of the highest numity oriented school"sbrish Retired Reverend Edgar Cooper, like many Americans, was concerned about the moral message that the Congress was sending the nation and world.

"I am reminded of George Washington's prayer for the nation which says that a young nation under God was secure." Cooper said. "President

Clinton's reluctant statement that there was 'no easy way to confess sin' shows that we as a nation need to repent of our broken vows to God. A mighty country with God's blessing can be a wonderful instrument of good to the world." At the Kings Mountain Senior Center, director Monty Thornburg saw the Clinton troubles as a bad signal for chil-

"I'm disappointed he was not found guilty," said Thornburg.
"Not only did the whole situation waste the taxpayer's money, it showed a double standard which is terrible for the kids."

Rounding out comments on Clinton, Kings Mountain insurance executive Bob Maner let it all hang out in his opinion of "The rascal got away," Maner said. "If he had been tried in a church by Republicans or Democrats, he would have been convicted. I'm proud of the House managers, but the poor devils in the Senate didn't have the courage to do it.' Just because the vote is over, don't think that Clinton is going to find peace any time soon. Like the rest of America, he will have a long time to ponder what the nation has been through before any dust settles.

Open Gate Garden Club has program on recycling met in the dining room at EdenGardens on February 10 with Mrs. Eugene McCarter as hostess. Fifteen members enjoyed the delicious dessert course with a Valentine motif.

Mrs. McCarter, President, welcomed all members and introduced Mrs. John Howze who gave a very interesting and informative program on "The Magic of Recycling." She stated that recycling is an essential step toward solving this country's solid waste problem, but it has much farther ranging effects. Recycling benefits every-

Seventeen pulp trees are saved by each ton of paper made from recycled materials, and only half the water is needed to manufacture recycled paper. Producing one aluminum

The Open Gate Garden Club can from recycled aluminum saves the energy equivalent of one half of the can filled with gasoline. By increasing the levels of steel and paper recycling in this country, we could afford to close down many nuclear power plants.

> Curbside collections are the most expensive method of collecting recycables from residential areas. Drop-off centers are the most common method of recycling in the United states. Two drop-off centers in Kings Mountain are located on Margrace and Oak Grove

About ten percent of the oil changed from cars gets recycled. It has been estimated that the amount of oil that is dumped in the United States annually equals 10 to 20 times the amount that was spilled from the Exxon tanker in Alaska in 1989.

Between 25 and 50 percent of waste volume in landfills is from yard waste. Grass that is bagged comprises a large share of the waste. Twenty states have legislation to end the lawn waste. The clippings from the yard should be used in composting, because grass clippings have a high nitrogen content. Another good mulch is newspapers. Use several layers in beds and around trees with pine needles. The paper will keep out weeds and break down in the

The Kings Mountain Public Works Department has free mulch to pick up. Cleveland County sells it by the ton.

The club plans to plant a tree in celebration of Arbor Day. The place will be selected by the Conservation Committee.

CCB promotes Sandra Stone

Central Carolina Bank in Kings Mountain has promoted Sandra M. Stone to assistant branch manager. A Kings Mountain native, Stone is a graduate of Kings Mountain High School, and attends Oak Grove Baptist Church. She is married to William Stone and has two children, Larry and Stone's banking career started with Home Federal Savings and Loan way back in 1977. In 1979, that institution was acquired by CCB. Over the years Stone has held positions including teller, customer sales and service representative, and loan officer.

SANDRA STONE

"I feel that my experience in coming up through the ranks will be a valuable asset in my new position," Stone said.

Quick with a smile and a laugh, Stone knows the value of developing and maintaining a close relationship with her customer base.

"I like to help people and see that their financial needs are met," said Stone. "Beyond that, we like to think of the people who do business with us as friends, not just customers." Ready to serve her patrons with knowledge and friendliness, Stone is a credit to her company and community.
