HOT DOG

From 1A

The hot dog drill at One Stop involves getting a steamed bun from a little oven, tonging your dog of choice on the bun, then building whatever style of hot dog you desire. Condiments are available in little packs and include hot sauce, mustard, ketchup, and mayo. Fixin's are in separate containers and include slaw, onion, and chili. One important thing to note about the hot dog station at One Stop is the cleanliness.

The fixins' on Griffin's hot dog are freshly made each day. Slaw still had some crunchy bits in it and had not turned into green mush. Onions were not overpowering and were diced to a good size. The chili was a little sharp, but not excessively so. Lots of mustard topped the whole $1.15 deal off.

A fully loaded dog at One Stop is less than a buck. Add a fountain drink and chips and the price is only $1.69.

Maybe I was just extra hungry, or maybe it was because the hot dog at Griffin reminded me of those we used to get from Belmont Drugs when I was a kid, but I ended up tearing a piece off the little cardboard boat the dog was served in and used it like a spoon to scoop up and devour every bit of goodie that had fallen off.

Folks have been coming to Griffin Drugs in Kings Mountain for decades looking for a dog. The one they find there is unusually fine. Griffin's hot dog is a taste of the old time soda fountain days when hot dogs, hamburgers, and toasted pimento cheese sandwiches filled many lunchtime tummies.

Last stop on the hot dog trail was Rick's Ole Country Store and Grill in the Ebenezer community. A popular stop for people traversing the highway between Cherryville and Kings Mountain, Rick's serves up a variety of sandwiches and other grub in addition to hot dogs.

The hot dog at Griffin is served on a lightly toasted bun whose slightly crunch and warm exterior adds another dimension of "mouth feel" to the eating experience. Jammed in the bun, Griffin's weenie is a plump, juicy affair without any of that artificial red #4 twang one often finds on lesser quality franks.

The hot dog at Rick's was a tasty affair topped with chopped onions, chili, mustard, and slaw. Of all the ingredients that went into making Rick's hot dog, the slaw was perhaps the most unique. Homemade, Rick's slaw was liberally spiced with flecks of black pepper. This gave the entire dog a bit of bite that set it apart from most bland, store bought slaws. Price of a hot dog all the way at Rick's was $1.15 plus tax.
