Family A-Fair

Cleveland County Fair is a family tradition

By TODD HAGANS Republic Newspapers

A sunny Sunday afternoon provided the perfect invitation for the crowd of people attending the 78th annual Cleveland County Fair.

Fair goers enjoyed viewing arts and crafts exhibits, taking a whirl on one of the many amusement rides like Pharaoh's Fury and the Orbitor and sampling a bounty of carnival delicacies ranging from funnel cakes to cotton candy.

For Moss Lake resident Dena Green, the food is one of her top reasons for attending the Cleveland County spectacle.

"The fair food is like no other," said Green, who made her way to the Shelby fairgrounds to watch her daughter, Kendra, perform with her dance group. "I like the fact that the kids have a chance to dance."

Vangelyn King of Shelby said the fair means "walking around" and sampling French fries and Polish sausage, her favorite fair foods.

"It is just a thing that I have to come to the fair every year to enjoy myself," said King

The fair is a yearly tradition for Cherryville cattle farmers Dean and Nancy Crocker. The Crockers show some of the area's top Black Angus and have the winning ribbons to prove it.

Recipients of nine first place awards, a second place ribbon and two grand champion banners for the top bull and female, the Crockers also took home the fair's Herdsman Award for keeping their stalling area in tip-top shape.

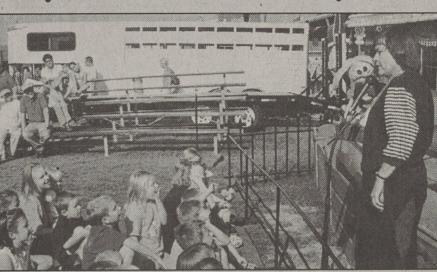

Farming is a family affair for the Crockers, who share their love of cattle with their son, Clinton.

"Our son takes this business seriously," said Nancy, who meets and greets spectators strolling through the arena to get an up-close look at the many farm animals.

Dean said judges consider areas like structural correctness, muscle tone and general eye appeal when evaluating cattle for the fair's top prizes and that "breeding, feeding and working with them" are the secrets to raising award-winning cattle.

"It just takes a special animal to be a show

joined the Crockers in exhibiting cattle at the fair. After the Cleveland County Fair, the Crockers will attend the North Carolina State Fair in Raleigh and the South Carolina State Fair in Columbia both slated for later this month.

Bessemer City residents Becky Smith and Dawn Rickus enjoyed seeing all of the attractions Sunday, but one in particular - Blaze, the world famous balloon-blowing goat - captured the attention of Rickus' young son, who carried an orange balloon that had been twisted into a design by Blaze's sidekick, Mr. Happy.

The balloon-blowing goat entertained many young children, who watched in amazement, while their parents chuckled and shook their heads.

Outside of Goforth Hall, Louis Floyd and Jerry Ross, both members of American Legion Post 155 in Kings Mountain, spent time selling raffle tickets. Floyd said the lucky ticket will be selected Saturday night and the winner will take home either a new riding lawn mower or a $1,000 Wal-Mart shopping spree.

Floyd, who lives in Bessemer City and has been associated with Post 100 baseball in Cherryville, said proceeds from the raffle will benefit the legion's baseball program, which gives teenage boys the chance to play ball each summer.

"If we can save one young boy from being on drugs or on the street, we've done our job," said Floyd. Calling the fair one of the best around, Floyd praised fair organizers for putting on a fantastic show every year for Cleveland County residents.

"Joe Goforth and his staff have done wonders for the fair in Cleveland County," said Floyd. "The Cleveland County Fair is one of the best in North Carolina."

The 2002 edition of the Cleveland County Fair got off to a slow start last week as rain from Hurricane Isidore kept people away from the midway attractions. Attendance figures indicate that only 3,271 people passed through the gates last Thursday compared to 10,564 opening-day guests in 2001. Friday's numbers showed 8,449 patrons compared to 14,922 in 2001. A total of 178,256 people attended the fair last year.

This year's fair pays tribute to the 100th anniversary of the 4-H program. A special 4-H history display shows old newspaper clippings, photos, trophies and other memorabilia that documents the 4-H tradition in Cleveland County. One newspaper clipping from the October 9, 1969 edition of the Kings Mountain Herald shows the Dixon Community's 4-H club's winning fair booth that portrayed the theme, '4-H in Four Seasons.' Other photos show youngsters enjoying 4-H camp at Camp Cherokee at the Kings Mountain State Park.

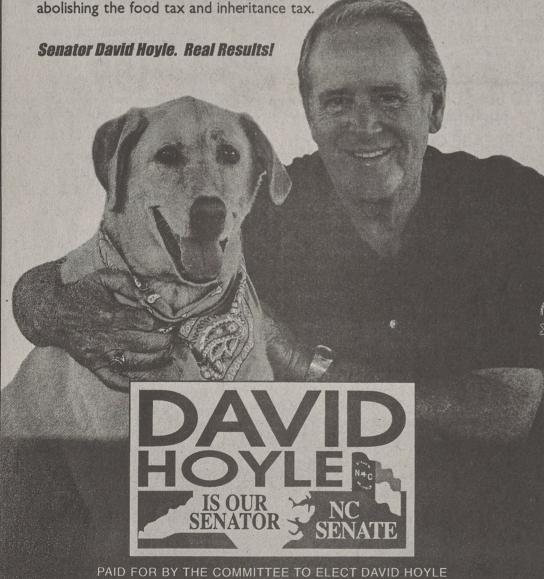

The fair continues today through Saturday with gates remaining open each evening until 11 p.m.
