DAR chapter holds first meeting of year

The Colonel Frederick Hambright Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution met Monday at Mauney Memorial Library for the first meeting of the year. There were 12 members and one visitor present.

Regent Margaret McGinnis called the meeting to order. Robin Masters led the ritual. Juanita Steffy and Becky Scism led the pledge to the flags.

June Higginbotham introduced "Constitution Week" speaker, Steve Marlowe. He spoke of the constitution and about Revolutionary times and the hardships faced by those who fought for independence.

Robin Masters gave the president general's message and the national defense by Louise Roberts reminded the group that the threat of war seems to be imminent at present.

Minutes were read by Robin Masters and approved. Betty Masters gave the treasurer's report. She also did the DAR minute and the Indian Minute.

The names of several prospective members were presented to the membership, and were approved.

The chapter will be selling two-year calendar books in the coming weeks. It was also agreed to sell Innisbrook Wrap as the money making project for the year.

The chapter, along with other chapters, met the Over the Mountain Marches with dinner on October 7 at Antioch Baptist Church near Grover.

The membership was informed of the dedication of the new DAR marker for Colonel Frederick Hambright Sunday, October 13 at Shiloh Presbyterian Church cemetery near Grover.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Regent Margaret McGinnis.

Mrs. McGinnis hosts Open Gate Garden Club

The Open Gate Garden Club met with Ethel McGinnis on October 9. A delicious dessert was served to 12 members.

Jessie Collins, President, welcomed members and introduced Flora Yarbro. She presented an interesting and informative program on "Roses."

The rose has become the nation's favorite flower. This is evident from the widespread interest in it as a home garden flower and from its popularity as a cut flower for all occasions.

Flower experts recognize two main classes of cultivated roses. The first kind that blooms once a year is the yellow brier, damask rose, moss rose and many climbers. The second variety bloom more than once a year. They are known as summer and autumn roses. Examples are the teas, hybrid teas, floribunda, baby rambles and China roses.

Roses grow in many parts of the world but do well in mild climates. They like fertile garden soil with good drainage. They need four to six hours sun each day.

One of the most perplexing problems of rose culture is disease control. The most serious disease of roses are powdery mildew and black spot. Black spot is the most serious. To control pests and diseases spray weekly.

The method of pruning roses must be varied for each kind of rose. As a general rule, weak growing varieties should be pruned lightly and vigorously.

Roses intended for an important occasion should be picked four or more hours in advance and conditioned in warm water. Before arranging, cut stems at an angle the length you want.

The rose is still the most popular garden flower, beloved by all for its fragrance, form and variety of colors.

Timely tips were given by Phyllis Carpenter. Don't spray water on chrysanthemums in bloom but water at ground level. Now is the time to plant trees and shrubs. Collect season's last annuals for drying. Flowers such as zinnias, cockscomb and golden rod all dry well.

The beautiful exhibit made by Peggy Baird for the Cleveland county Fair booth was displayed.

A beautiful arrangement "October Mist" was made of yellow and orange marigolds with greenery in a ceramic jack-o-lantern.

The District meeting will be held November 6 at Piper Glen. Several members plan to attend.

The friendship basket was won by Grace Talbert.
