EASTER From 1A

Erica Carpenter, 7, bringing her to the hunt since she was born.

"We have her picture made with the Easter Bunny every year," her mom said.

Fully aware that childhood fades fast, Carpenter treasures each spring.

"This might be the last year she'll want to. You can never tell," she said.

This year Erica found miniature ducks, airplanes and a bowling set in her eggs. At home she has her own Easter chick, part of a school project.

Family plans for Easter Sunday included a visit to Scott Carpenter's father's house for dinner following church.

After the egg hunt, kids lined up to have eggs, butterflies, chicks, hearts, lady bugs, suns, flowers, bunnies and dragonflies painted on their faces. Other activities, all planned by Mauney Memorial Library's Harris Children's Department, included an egg toss, competition to count jelly beans in a jar and sack races with the Easter Bunny.

The human-sized bunny arrived on back of a Kings Mountain Fire Department truck. He blew kisses, waved and high-fived the 100 or so children and their parents who braved chilly temperatures to attend the free event.

City events coordinator Ellis Noell was pleased with the festivities.

"It went real well. I just wish we had better weather. It's okay. It's not raining. This is an event you can't postpone," he said.

On Thursday and Friday the bunny visited White Oak Manor, Summit Place, Bolin Day Care, Life Enrichment Center, Penley's Chapel Day Care, Katie's Small Wonders and Heavenly Kids.

Kings Mountain High School students Crystal McClain, Brittany McCready and Sandy Short helped out with the bunny's visit to the Patrick Center where seniors assisted kids from St. Matthew's Preschool hunt eggs. The students are studying early childhood development.

class. While teen drivers are statistically more likely to have an accident, they are less likely than adults to be arrested for driving while impaired.

"It seems to be working. There are not a whole lot of teenagers getting DWIs,"

King said. "I think we're actually making an impact."

Drivers under age 21 who are convicted of driving while impaired lose their license until age 21 or one year, which ever time period is longer.

Saturday the two will smoke pork, chicken and ribs. They've created two homemade basting sauces, both vinegar-based, and a tomato-based table sauce. They're still working on a third sauce for the chicken.

"We're always looking for something better," she said. Bobby Etters of the Kings Mountain-based Smokin' Mountain Boys team says competition is getting fierce. "It's kind of hard for the hometown boys. There's a lot of good cookers out there," he said.

Etters has met cooks who are retired and can devote their full attention to rubs, bastes, sauces and wood.

The slower and the longer you cook it, the better," Etters confides.

OLLIS From 1A

Richard Prow, will officiate at Ollis' funeral this after-

"He just taught me so much biblically, spiritually, personally. Just listening to him talk," Wells said.

City Councilman Houston Corn, who was also Ollis' neighbor of 27 years, was hit hard by the news. "He's just a great guy. He was more like a brother than anything. He's in a better place," Corn said.

Ollis knew more about the water department than anyone in the city, according to

"He cared a lot about his job. He always did what was right for the city," Corn said. "He would do anything for anybody."

Rev. Eugene Land who was pastor of Ollis' church, Second Baptist from 1970 to 1997, said he was a great leader both on the job and at church.

Ollis served as a deacon,

Sunday school teacher and choir member under Land. 'He was a joy to work with," Land said. Ollis trained those who worked for him, then gave them the freedom to do their jobs, according to Land. "He knew how to work with people. People had a lot of confidence in him," the minister said.

Former City Councilman Gene White, who worked with Ollis as a council member, city planner and development coordinator, said one of Ollis' biggest accomplishments was mapping the city water and sewer lines.

"You go to the guy and he knows the answer," White said. "He'll be sorely missed.'

White also said Ollis was a talented vocalist and an avid gemologist.

Everyone who talked about Óllis described him as a strong family man and dedicated Christian.

'He loved the Lord, his family and his church," Land said.
