LOCAL

Police officers receive citations

Four Kings Mountain police officers earned Region C citations for apprehending a breaking and entering suspect minutes after the crime.

Sgt. S.M. Skinner, Cpl. Chad Burnette and patrolmen Mark Butler and K.L. Putnam were honored for their work.

While driving toward his house, a

Groves Street homeowner spotted a man breaking into his residence. Police arrived and searched the home, finding two doors and a window forced open. They apprehended a man in nearby woods.

After identification by the homeowner, the man was searched. Items from the home were found in his pants pockets. The suspect was arrested and charged.

Skinner has been with the department for nine years; Burnette, six years; Butler, three years and Putnam, one year.

Law enforcement agencies from Cleveland, Rutherford, Polk and McDowell counties make up Region C.

P&Z board approves rezoning, matter now goes to KM council

BY ANDIE L. BRYMER
Staff Writer

Objection to a conditional use rezoning came down to the smell of manure during a Monday afternoon Kings Mountain Planning and Zoning board meeting.

Stephen and Amy Sutton applied last month for the permit which would allow them to have horses and cattle at their 108 Chestnut Ridge Road home. Board members continued the hearing to June, requesting additional information from the Suttons.

Planning Director Steve Killian told board members that the Suttons had specified location options for the barn and had agreed to drop the number of cattle from 15 to eight.

Neighbor Jim Claffe of 1315 Piedmont Avenue objected to the zoning change.

"A cow is a machine that produces manure; milk and meat are a by product," he said.

Claffe told planning board members that he purchased his home 19 years ago from a widow. Two other widows lived in the homes adjacent to his.

"Nineteen years later I live next to a feedlot. I didn't choose to live next to a feedlot," he said.

Claffe said that the Suttons had been good neighbors expect for heeding his request to get rid of their animals.

The planning board unanimously recommended the rezoning change. Its recommendation is non-binding. The Kings Mountain City Council will vote on the request at its June 29 meeting.
