How to take care of your brushes

Tips on taking care of your painting brushes:
Your brushes are an investment. By cleaning them thoroughly and properly at the end of a painting session, they will last longer.

Pat Childers Arts

Be sure to wipe off any excess paint using a cloth or soft tissue. Rinse the brush in turpentine if you've been using oils, or lukewarm water for water-based paints.

Wash using mild soap, dab your brush gently into the piece of soap, then work up a lather in the palm of your hand. Rinse and repeat until there's no trace of any color coming out. Rinse again to make sure there is no soap left in brush, then take fingers to gently shape the head into its correct shape. Stand brushes up in a container to dry. These tips will ensure a long lasting brushes.

Ms. Margaret Dixon will instruct the children's class on April 30. Margaret has been a member of the Dona Quela taught out of her home and she was a graduate of the Escuela de Bellios Artes in Buenos Aires, Argentina and also the mother school of Beaux Arts in Paris, France. Since moving to Kings Mountain, Margaret has benefited from the art instruction of John Brady and Zoltan Szabo. She greatly acknowledges the opportunities of the SAS for many sponsored workshops that she has been a part of.
