for police and city workers. "The police should have the support and equipment that they need to do their jobs," he said. "The salaries of the police department and all other city employees should be in line with other cities comparable to Kings Mountain."

Rodney Gordon is running for Ward 4 against incumbent Kay Hambright. He wants to make Kings Mountain attractive to potential and existing industry and residents. Gordon supports promoting recreation and family values.

"We need leaders in Kings Mountain that are honest and have ethical and moral courage," he said. Gordon said he would base all decisions on short and long term effects.

"Kings Mountain is truly blessed and we must confront our issues instead of passing them along to future generations."

Gordon is the co-owner of Carolina Air Solutions, a commercial and industrial heating and air conditioning company. He works with owners, facility engineers, CEOs and executive directors of places like Presbyterian Healthcare, Charlotte Mecklenburg Schools, Bowater, Federal courthouses and the White House complex. "My experience in working with these types of facilities enhances my abilities to conduct city business for the City of Kings Mountain," he said.

Hambright is running for her second term.

"I've never failed to follow through," she said.

Hambright said that she has brought citizens' issues to the council.

"I'm one person but I do the best I can to meet their needs," she said.

Hambright said serving on the council is an honor.

Calvin Huffman has filed for a town commissioner seat in Grover.

"I'm not satisfied with the way things are run in Grover," he said. "They (council) are not doing things for the citizens of Grover."

He supports a referendum which would allow voters to decide on alcohol sales.

Huffman owns a concrete and septic tank business. He and his wife Donna also raise goats and cows.

Incumbent Bill Willis filed for re-election July 19. His seat along with one's held by Max Rollins and John Harry are up for election this year.

Kings Mountain resident Terry McClain has filed for Cleveland County School Board. Last year he was appointed by the board to fill the appointed seat of Larry Allen, who was not eligible to serve because he is an employee of the merged school system.

In addition to McClain, seats held by George Litton, Mary Evans and Steve Curtis are up for election. Litton and Evans have filed along with Bobby Steen, Joanne Holowecky, Philip Glover, Tammy Trammel, Wilburn Wellmon and Barbara Minder. McClain is the only candidate from Kings Mountain.
