Dementia tips available at Life Enrichment

People with dementia sometimes refuse to bathe.

Bathing can become a source of agitation or even aggression as family members try to keep a person clean and free of odor and disease. For the person with dementia, bathing may be a frightening experience. The person may be afraid of water or afraid of falling, may be cold or in pain. A wife may not recognize the man who is her husband and reacts with violence that a stranger is trying to undress her.

The Life Enrichment Center Adult Day Care and Health Service, which has 27 years of experience dealing with dementia and providing personal care, including baths, has compiled a list of 52 tips for helping family members bathe someone who resists bathing.

The tips are free and are available by calling Life Enrichment at 704-484-0405 or 704-739-4858.

For more information or a tour to see the health care suites, which include the personal care areas and handicap accessible tubs, at Life Enrichment Center, call Linda at the Shelby facility at 704-484-0405 or Debbie at the Kings Mountain facility at 704-739-4858.
