Smith named a delegate to DNC

On Saturday, North Carolina Democrats completed the selection of their delegates to the Democratic National Convention to be held in Charlotte in

ROBIN SMITH

September, and Robin Smith of Kings Mountain will be among them. She topped the ballot in a 10th Congressional District election held in conjunction with the N. C. State Democratic Convention in Raleigh.

Back in May, Nick Carpenter of Shelby was elected as delegate during the selection process undertaken at district conventions across the state.

"We're delighted that two local Democrats will be among the 158 voting delegates in Charlotte," said Pat Poston, secretary of the Cleveland County Democratic Party. "We were proud to support their candidacies, knowing they'll represent us and the 10th District well."

For 15 years as founder and president of It Takes A Village Child Development Center in Kings Mountain, Smith has advocated vigorously on the importance of quality education at the earliest stages of development - from infancy to pre-school.

She earned a master's degree in management at Pepperdine University and served 15 years in the U. S. Army in the United States and abroad, leaving active duty as a field-grade officer at the rank of major. She now joins the ranks of other veterans in the U. S. Army Retired Reserves.

Smith worked hard as a local volunteer in Barack Obama's victorious 2008 presidential campaign, and being involved at the political grassroots-level led to her application to be a convention delegate. "Together," he says, "we must do it again."

Find Leo with this week's Summer Reading Clue:

The kickoff to Summer Reading was fantastic! The only thing missing is Leo the Lightning Bug. He missed Criss Cross Mangosauce and now we fear he is hiding again. There was a rumor that he thought we needed some new furniture and accessories at the library. Could he be somewhere on Railroad Avenue shopping? Please help us find him.

Check The Herald each week for another clue.
