Lemonade sale nets $145 for Relay for Life

East Elementary fourth graders recently had the opportunity to experience firsthand the principles of economics studied in social studies lessons. Students created their own business, Lemonade for Life, in order to better understand supply and demand, production, and distribution. Students began by creating a business plan detailing the sale of lemonade and cookies as a fundraiser for East School's Relay for Life team. Students submitted names for their business and voted to choose a name that represented their business well.

Establishing the products to sell based on the startup cost sparked much debate, and students decided to charge fifty cents for two cookies and a cup of lemonade. An advertising campaign included student-created signs, flyers sent home in homework folders and letters to the teachers asking them to promote the event. Prior to event day, students worked on job descriptions and divided the labor. Event day was exciting with the actual setup on the front lawn of the school. The student body visited the three food stations to make their purchases and received a cancer prevention flyer to inform them of healthy behaviors. At the conclusion, the profits netted our Relay for Life team $145.60. Students took the time to send thank you notes to participating customers and evaluated the successes and hardships of being business owners. Overall, students were thrilled with the support of their school friends. Kings Mountain is holding its Relay for Life on Saturday, May 9 at the walking track on York Rd.
