New fees go into effect Oct. 1 for NC poultry growers

North Carolina poultry growers who want to join the National Poultry Improvement Plan and receive a registration number will have to pay a $50 registration fee plus 10 cents per bird tested beginning Oct. 1.

Growers with an existing registration number will need to pay a $10 annual recertification fee and pay 10 cents per bird tested to maintain their status. The fees were set by the General Assembly this summer to help cover costs incurred by the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services to administer the program.

Growers who sell live baby poultry or hatching eggs must be compliant with basic NPIP testing requirements, though they are not required to join the NPIP.

"This fee will help our Veterinary Division and our nationally accredited veterinary laboratories allocate the resources needed to maintain a healthy poultry industry in North Carolina," Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler said. "North Carolina's poultry growers contribute more than $4 billion in cash receipts to the state's economy and we must be ever vigilant in our disease surveillance efforts."

The NPIP was established in the 1930s to improve poultry and poultry products on a national level and to eliminate Salmonella pullorum disease, which caused up to 80 percent mortality in young flocks. The program was later extended to include testing and monitoring for several more diseases including most recently, avian influenza - in commercial poultry, turkeys, waterfowl, exhibition poultry, backyard poultry and game birds.

Last year, the NCDA&CS Veterinary Division registered 596 new flocks, of which 497 were non-commercial. Overall, North Carolina has more than 8,100 registered flocks.

Clinton charged with attempted murder

Michael David Clinton, 33, of 1709 Martin Road, was booked into Gaston drove away from their resi-County Jail on Sunday under no bond on an attempted murder charge.

He also faces charges of assault on a female, shooting a weapon into a moving vehicle, resisting a public officer and injury to personal property belonging to Gaston Emergency Medical Services.

Clinton allegedly fired shots at his wife as she dence located between Kings Mountain and Cherryville.

Gaston County Police arrived at the home before 7 p.m. Sunday night and Clinton refused to come out. Officers apprehended the suspect as he ran from the house.

$178,000 in drugs seized.

"The success of Operation Southern Snare had a positive and lasting impact on our community," said Kings Mountain Chief of Police Melvin Proctor. He added, "This type of multi agency cooperation sends a clear message to the citizens of Kings Mountain and to criminals who think they can conduct their illegal activities in our area. The Kings Mountain Police department will work alongside our federal and state law enforcement partners to protect the safety of the communities we serve.'

The arrests include narcotics-related offenses, firearms violations and other violent crimes. The investigations are ongoing which may result in additional charges against the defendants. "Southern Snare" began in May and concluded on Sept. 5 with special emphasis placed on communities in Gastonia and Shelby, according to Anne M. Tompkins, U. S. Attorney for the Western District of North Carolina.

"I commend the law enforcement partners involved in this cross-jurisdictional and multi-agency operation for their hard work and their commitment to making our streets and communities safer," Tompkins said.

U.S. Marshal Kelly Nesbit, Western District North Carolina, said the success of Operation Southern Snare is the result of close cooperation and coordination with law enforcement partners. SBI Director B.W. Collier said, "A lot of effort and collaboration among the participating law enforcement agencies has led to safer communities in Cleveland and Gaston counties. I applaud this successful operation.'

Cleveland County Sheriff Alan Norman said, "The U.S. Marshal Service has been very beneficial in assisting us in dealing with our gang members in Cleveland County. We are looking forward to continuing this team approach with future operations.'

Wayne L. Dixie, Special Agent US Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, said that ATF's mission is to identify, pursue and perfect criminal cases against individuals who illegally possess and use firearms in furtherance of their criminal activities. "We will continue to work with the U.S. Marshal Service and our local counterparts in Cleveland and Gaston counties to ensure that those who foster violence in this region are held to account for their activities."

"Collaborating with our partners at the federal and local levels on operations like this one brings tremendous results," said Johnny Hawkins, Director of Security Services for the N. C. Department of Public Safety.'

The efforts of all the law enforcement officers involved in this operation will result in amazing returns for our community. This project is a great example of the impact we can make by working hand-in-hand with our federal and state partners.

Together, we have addressed issues such as gangs, drugs and guns, which have been deteriorating our communities. Although this operation is coming to a close, we see it as a beginning instead of an ending. The partnerships formed over the past few months will continue to grow and our com-
