and his group asked for design bids for construction, and "now you know the rest of the story." This is the 50th Anniversary of the end of the Vietnam War. At one time, we were young men who answered the call to go to a far-away place known as Vietnam. Now, as older men, and veterans of an era gone by, we want to honor our dead comrades and visit the "Wall." If you could help to make this a reality it would be greatly appreciated.

DO NOT KILL: police officers, black people, white people or any people

Nevada town two years ago and The Ten Commandments were posted in front of the courthouse. I would tell you the name but I don't want someone fussing and fuming at those good people for keeping The Ten Commandments up front and public. Actually there are still several state and county buildings where you can find The Ten Commandments posted or engraved even in granite. The Ten Commandments has never kept this nation from doing anything wrong. People went right on killing; stealing, disrespecting their parents and doing all sorts of stuff that The Ten Commandments forbid us from doing. I totally understand separation of church and state. I don't want to see something from the Koran on my local court or state house. However, I think this would be a good time to bring back the sixth commandment. We don't even have to refer to it as the sixth commandment. Let's just simply start reposting in our elementary, junior high and senior high schools these three words, "Do Not Kill." Or, "Do Not Murder." The minds of little children are very impressive and teachable. My father put the fear of God into me when it came to smoking. From the time I was a young child he successfully made me afraid of smoking or drinking alcohol. This kind of teaching and impressing is harder when children become teenagers. Teenagers start becoming smarter than their parents so they think. I realize hanging "Do Not Kill" on every wall and home in America will not eliminate the murder of black people, white people, Hispanics or police officers. However, how could it hurt? Glenn Mollette is an American Syndicated Columnist and Author. He is the author of eleven books and read in all fifty states.
