They wish to participate in the benefits of the noble fund which Mr. Penbody created for the Southren people. An institution, we think, might be established for the instruction of girls and young women in those callings which would be likely to prove remunerative. For example, some might be brought up to the trade new your subscription. of printing, others to wood-engraving, others to book-keeping, telegraph-operating, and the lighter occupations generally. The institutions would doubtless be largely assisted by the State in which it happened to be placed and in course of time it would save many Southern woman from "the humiliation of tion possible with regard to that important eneating the bitter bread of dependence." Such are the representations embodied in the petition, and there can be no question that they appeal strongly to the sympathics. Whether ganized or revived. the plan shadowed forth is compatible with Mr. Peabody's general design it would be out of place to discuss here. The trustees will, doubtless, come to a just conclusion on the subject. But we may fairly hope that the efforts which are now being made by Southern women to lighten the hardships of their lot will be crowned with success .- New York Times.

REED ORGANS, &c.

The following remarks and suggestions relative o this immensely popular instrument will doubt less interest and profit very many of our readers; we commend the article to their careful perusal : A hundred and one makers of Organs, Gottage Parlor, Cabinet, American, School Organs, etc., etc., are each claiming to make the best instrument in the world. Being comparatively a new instrument, as at present constructed, we are convinced the public are much less capable of judging of its merits, or demerits, than of most other instruments If there is really an essential difference in them, if there are some excellent and some worthless ones, the public should have some criterion for judging of them, some facts which will enlighten them. We cheerfully concede the space for this article, knowing that there is hardly a family, or church, or school in all the land, but is more or less interested in this topic. We are also aware of osurce, and thus we give it to our readers. The question is often asked, what are "reed or PRICE. But an brgail, to be in reality an organ, must have wind chest or reservoir for air separate from the generally. bellows, into which wind-chest the reeds open, and the tone has room to expand and perfect itself into the full round tone, similar to the flute, or pipe or gan, even, smooth, firm, and mellow; and this tone from reeds cannot be obtained in any other way known. Nothing so annoys a true organist as to have the volume of sound swelling and jerking spasmodically with every variation of force on the bellows, which is always the case when the reeds open direct into the bellows or air passages, in stead of a wind-chest or sound box. And yet some makers even go so far as to claim this spasmodic or automatic jerking of the bellows on the reeds as an excellence, just as though they did not know that it must very soon throw the reeds out of tune, and injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the bellows; and as though it were not an injure the best scientine writers in this constitute with and Europe are contributors, to its pagen Many of the articles have the charm of remance a bout them, and inspire the mind with noble ideas.
