Family Night dinner, held at the First Presbyterian church Wednesday evening, was featured by a program on church extension. The pastor, Rev. N. R. McGeachy, spoke on the extension program.

Circle No. 4 of the women of the church, had an accent on the extension program at its meeting Monday afternoon. With the general theme "The Serving Church," the program was the story of some of the work done recently, attractive slides illustrating the narration. Pictures showed, all made a few years ago by Rev. T. B. Southall, included The Church in the Woods at Bridgewater, West View church, somewhere in the area of Marion and Morganton and a number of scenes at Camp Grier. The lake at Camp Grier made a particularly attractive picture.

Also showed were pictures of the Men of the Church of Concord Presbytery at an annual dinner at Barium Springs and the officers of the Presbytery. Miss Ann Michael was pictured planning a program in area work and Mrs. John L. Fairley in her work here with the leadership school.

Entre Nous Club Opens Fall Season

The Entre Nous club, meeting with the club president, Mrs. E. M. Land, opened the fall season with the birthday party. This club, one of the senior social organizations of Statesville, was organized in October and the anniversary is generally marked at the first fall meeting.

The dinner table was touched with a hint of fall in the berry center piece and the hint of summer lingered in the bowl of beautiful roses that was on the sideboard. Roses and early fall flowers were intermixed in the reception rooms and the hall. A delicious dinner was served with pheasant as the main course.

Three of the club members, Mrs. James H. Cornell, Mrs. Elvie McElwee Selby and Mrs. E. R. Rankin returned last week from the foliage trip through the New England states and after dinner they gave some of the high spots of their fascinating visit. Mrs. Land showed pictures that she and her sister, Mrs. Riker, took when they made the New England tour in late summer and some of Mrs. Riker's impressions of the historic towns, their architectural designs, the furnishings of homes and the general planning added to the program. In keeping with the fall and with the New England reminiscences were the favors that Mrs. Land gave her guests, colorful miniature jugs of maple syrup.

Miss Carrie Hoffman of Danville, Va., was the only out of town club member present.

Archives Dept. Publishes Book Edited By Powell

A volume of early Carolina documents covering the years 1664-1675, edited by William S. Powell, librarian of the North Carolina Collection in the U. N. C. Library, has been published by the Department of Archives and History in Raleigh.

The original documents, dealing with the establishment of a government in the colonial county of Albemarle and with personal affairs of the colonists were a gift to the State of North Carolina from the late Congressman Thurmmond Chatham. They are now in the State Archives in Raleigh.

Powell's book, entitled "Ye Countie of Albemarle in Carolina," contains an exact transcription of the documents together with introductory material which recounts the story of the seventeenth century settlement of Carolina.

A year-by-year chronology of important events in the infant colony between 1602 and 1704 plus a large folded chart setting forth the various English charters, grants, and proprietors of the territory of Carolina from the time of John Cabot to the Declaration of Independence, complete the book.

Powell had edited earlier this year an annotated bibliography entitled "North Carolina Fiction, 1734-1957," published in the Library Studies Series. Last December he received a Charles A. Cannon Award for work in historical research and restoration.

In 1956 Powell was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for research in England to uncover the identities of the Roanoke Island colonists and explorers of 1584-1590. Holder of three degrees from UNC, he formerly worked for Yale University's Rare Book Room and the N. C. Department of Archives and History.

Wm. S. "Bill" Powell is a native of Statesville and did some youthful "research" work for the WPA, compiling local historic data.

Food Stores Now Sell Canned Clocks

While man has yet to succeed in stopping time, he's finally gotten around to preserving it — in steel "tin" cans.

A Connecticut clock manufacturer recently began packing alarm clocks in cans for shipment to food stores. According to the manufacturer, the cans protect the clocks from breakage during handling. The cans also prevent lubricating oils from drying out. The manufacturer issues a one-year guarantee on his products, rather than the usual ninety days.

Committee Begins Study Of County Schools

Headed by Superintendent Harry Arndt of Catawba county a committee of six men, appointed by the State Department of Public Instruction, Division of School Planning, arrived in Iredell county Wednesday to begin a survey in connection with the possibility of consolidated county high schools.

This group is making surveys and getting statistics on which they will base a recommendation to the board of education. The county school board requested the survey in order to have expert direction in any step that is made in consolidation. There is nothing definite as to consolidation but the majority of opinion seems to favor it, the debatable question being location. There will be a report as to the committee recommendations after the have been submitted to the board of education.

Weills Give Up Statesville House

Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Weill have given up the house on North Elm street that has been their residence for the greater part of their life in Statesville. They will continue their visits and will probably be here as much as in the more recent years, but they will have hereafter transient headquarters. They have an apartment home in New York City and they are in York, Pa., a great deal also, and in other places where the Thonet Industries are located. North Carolina Furniture, Inc., is the local branch of the more than a century old industries and it was in official connection with this business that Mr. and Mrs. Weill first came here in 1941. Widely travelled and a most interesting couple, Mr. and Mrs. Weill have been an addition to the town and have made sincere friends here who regret to see them give up residence.

Local Librarians At Workshop

Misses Deaton and Conner were in the bookmobile division of the shop; Miss Clark in the children's department, a phase of library work that she heads in the city library of Statesville. The three-day workshop closed Thursday. It was financed through federal library aid and at no local cost to those attending.

Last Friday Mrs. Nancy Pumphrey of the city library; Mrs. Nancy Davis of the Iredell County Library, attended a central Piedmont library conference in Salisbury.

This conference was for discussion of general library problems and ideas. A subject that centered the chief interest of the conference was centralized cataloging service. This is a new idea and one that is being advanced first through the Piedmont district of the Library association. It is not only a new idea for the State, it is also new in the country at large, so far as is known not being in official operation in any state except on a small scale and on a trial basis in an area of Los Angeles, California.

The central service of cataloging, also of processing and even purchasing, is the project under study. It has many phases of service and there are many questions to be considered, so at present it is purely in a study form with a committee named to explore the idea. Both Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Pumphrey have been named to this committee and they are also on the adult service section of the North Carolina library association.
