gress for approval of a course of action in urgent matters relating to the security of our country. While the responsibility for the conduct of foreign affairs is vested in the President by our Constitution, I am sure most Americans are comforted in the thought that our President is not inclined to "go it alone" in a matter of such grave importance and seeks the advice of the people of the country through their representatives in Congress.

The spirit in which the House responded to the President's message was heartening. The resolution came out of the House Foreign Affairs Committee with a unanimous vote of approval and members from both sides of the aisle, in a display of bi-partisanship in its finest form, to demonstrate a spirit of unity where foreign policy is concerned which must have been most impressive at home and abroad.

I quote again the statement made by Mr. Rayburn on the occasion of his recent election as Speaker when he said: "We are all in this thing together, whether we be Republican, Democrat or what-not." This statement impressed me because it is so like many statements I made myself during the course of the campaign, and that was that politics should end at our doorstep and on international affairs we should present a solid front. I further stated that the world situation is so grave and the problems so acute that it is going to take the combined intelligence of all of our leaders—Democrats and Republicans alike—to solve the. I still feel that way.

Informal but private

Despite an informal look both inside and out, this three-bedroom ranch home is carefully planned to give utmost privacy and convenience. It is Plan AB200N of American Builder magazine, 79 W. Monroe St., Chicago 2.

Living and dining areas, which share a long wall of windows, face the rear, so that passersby cannot see in from the street. A large window-enclosed porch is also at the rear. Facing the street are a bedroom, large L-shaped bathroom, kitchen-dinette, and two-car garage.

The generous-sized rooms of the sleeping, living, and kitchen areas are conveniently accessible to the entrance and hall. There is a powder room just off the entrance foyer. One of the bedrooms doubles as a study.

A fireplace and wall of Roman brick partially separate the living and dining areas. The ceiling in these two rooms is coveled.

The eye-catching roof of white asphalt shingles has long sweeping lines and wide overhangs. Creating an illusion, the light-colored roof makes the home seem larger than it is.

Stairs at one end of the kitchen lead to a large basement containing the furnace, laundry, and a recreation room with a fireplace.

The dwelling has a floor area of 2,462 square feet, including porch and garage. This figure is helpful in estimating construction cost.
