Women's Editor...Sylvia Holmes

About two weeks ago, many of us read, with great interest, an article in the Charlotte Observer about the newly built home of Mr. and Mrs. Biggers who are parents of Mrs. Henry Neisler. Built especially for their retirement years, the house is adapted to meet the specific needs of this couple, one of whom spends a lot of time in a wheelchair. We are happy to welcome these newcomers to Kings Mountain and hope that they will have many happy years here.

The Charlotte Observer recently featured a picture of the robot traffic controller who was the subject of my "Ultimate Synthetic" column way back in early May. The Observer also ran a wire story last week reviewing "Gone With The Wind" which was also a topic of this column about a month ago. What Kings Mountain thinks today, Charlotte thinks tomorrow! It's not often that we get a chance to scoop the large circulation dailies!

I don't particularly enjoy dwelling on morbid topics but once again I feel compelled to complain about the situation of local traffic versus the downtown railroad crossings. On Saturday morning, I was approaching the Joy Theatre from US74 along Railroad, when a train came thundering towards me and the lights and bells did not start to function until the train was about one block from them.

I watched with horror because there were two vehicles on the tracks. One hastily moved forward and the other stayed put with its front end on the tracks adjacent to the tracks of the approaching train. Meanwhile another vehicle approached the track from the opposite direction, heard the train, and stopped just as the bells and lights became operational. I have never prayed so hard in my life before.

When I reached the Mirror Office, my heart was thumping loudly and I was visibly shaken by the near-miss experience. I am afraid the statistics are now building up against us and pretty soon one of the near misses will become a fatality. I hope that I am not in the vicinity when it occurs.

WEEKLY RECIPE

Dill Pickles

Dot Southwell

Cucumbers
Fresh garlic
Dill seed
Whole cloves
Dried red peppers
Vinegar
Water
Salt

This recipe is for approximately 12 quart jars of pickles.

Place in each quart jar: 1 clove garlic, 1 teaspoon dill seed, 1 whole clove, 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper.

Wash cucumbers, slice lengthwise and pack tightly into jars.

Mix together and bring to boil: 2 quarts vinegar, 1 quart water and 1 cup salt. Pour solution over cucumbers and seal jars.

The pickles taste best when left as long as possible before consumption.

This weeks recipe was given to us by Dot Southwell whose pickles are greatly relished by all those who eat them. Dot is the wife of Bob Southwell and they have two children, a daughter Sandy who will be a junior in High School this year and a son Steve, who will be a freshman.
