Having no air-conditioning in my car, makes me avoid too much travelling during the hot summer months, and so on a recent trip to Charlotte I discovered some new traffic devices that have been installed quite recently. They take you by surprise and quite rightly so.

I came across two of the devices, one on Woodlawn and one on Park Road. They are overhead signs with flashing yellow lights and as you drive close enough to read the words, a very personal warning is delivered. The signs say: When the lights are flashing, you are speeding! One sign was in a 35 zone and the other in a 45 zone. I think they will prove most effective.

Charlotte was the location, this week, for the 5th stop on the Virginia Slims Womens Tennis Circuit. Some very fine tennis was played for the largest prize ever to be offered at a Womens Tournament. The singles champion having won $12,000, certainly has come a long way, baby!

Tennis is fast growing in popularity both as a participating and a spectating sport. The ladies on tour in Charlotte, certainly gave a colorful display of both tennis and fashion. For her semi-finals match against Rosemary Casals, Billie-Jean King (single champion of both Wimbledon and Forest Hills) wore a pink V-necked dress trimmed in white. Her opponent wore a white dress which was decorated with dark blue embroidery over sections and both ladies wore matching panties to their outfits. This was quite a contrast to the other semi-finals match where both players opted for traditional white. Margaret Court wore a skirt, sleeveless blouse, socks and a peaked cap which all appeared to be in different shades of white while Nancy Riey Ginter wore her usual and rather masculine uniform of shorts, knit shirt with sleeves and floppy hat. Billy-Jean wore blue shoes with her pink dress and socks with bobbles at the heel which now seem very much in favor with tennis player as they long have been with women golfers.

Even the balls were colorful. Fluorescent yellow balls were used throughout Saturdays play and no doubt color television has played a large part in the break away from white. Stadium officials were smartly dressed in white and green, the ball boys wore green shirts and green shorts. The court and surrounding screen was green and the lines men and women wore white slacks or skirts with green knit shirts. Unfortunately the green of the linesmen's shirts was a mossy green which did not match the green of all the other officials and quite spoiled the otherwise harmonious effect.

The dedicated lady tennis pros who are now well and truly liberated, gave a colorful display of tennis, occasional temper tantrums, loud remarks and arguments with line judges. As one hard hit shot veered away from the court its player shouted "get in you little devil!" but the ball paid no heed to her remarks.

The climax of the afternoon was Billie-Jean's second entry on court this time for a doubles semi-finals match. Her white knit dress was very similar to string underwear and the holes were larger than the connecting stitches which made the dress completely transparent. The dress was very short, with round neck, short sleeves and two solid breast pockets. Underneath the dress you could see her white panties and she was, thank goodness, wearing a bra!

Yes, they've come a long way, baby!

HEALTH - HOME - BEAUTY

(Practical Hints For The Modern Woman)

By April Rhodes

Don't let your television be your child's only entertainment. Children need to learn to play alone and with others. Give them a generous amount of "make-believe." This will teach them to be creative.

Although swimming is about over and school has started, the young miss is advised to continue shampooing her hair every few days to keep it shiny and soft.

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa,
I am disturbed over the bad manners that some of our young people display and I find this very evident in people who have recently been given jobs which were not available to them before. I have always tried to be pleasant in my dealings with people and try not to be unreasonable but when they ignore questions and delay me while they chat with fellow workers or some friend who is visiting with them, it is simply too much. I also think others, who should know better, show deplorable bad taste when they sit around a room with nothing but a two inch strip concealing their bottoms. Is this the generation gap or am I old fashioned?
G.M.--Fla.

Well, those checkers have a hard job when the hours are busy ones and it is difficult to check items and answer questions at the same time but if you are deliberately ignored by someone who has at last been given a little authority, you would do the manager of the store a favor by reporting them. As for the naked appearance of our young people today, most people accept it and think nothing of it. However, I feel that a line should be drawn I believe that everyone is doing and what is bad taste. Leaving morals out of it, I think that sitting with only a two inch strip covering one's bottom is vulgar and very bad taste.
Louisa.
