In Old Jerusalem

LIKE 1000 YEARS AGO - This street scene in Jerusalem looks almost like it would have 1000 years ago. The Gaults were most impressed with the people who "take their time and live as they have for generations."

Gaults Impressed With Holy Land Tour

To see an actual baptism in the River Jordan can be the thrill of a lifetime. Not many people witness such an event but local folks C.J. Gault and his wife Nell did recently.

The Gaults were two of 74 area residents who went on a 10-day tour of the Holy Land arranged by Dr. Eugene Poston and Gardner-Webb College.

The tour group left for the Holy Land and Rome Mar. 4 and returned Mar. 13.

C.J. Gault said the group stayed at the Palace Hotel in what is called New Jerusalem. From the hotel, daily motor tours commenced to various spots in Old Jerusalem.

In the short 10 days, the Gaults saw Bethlehem, Nazareth, the Sea of Galilee, Tiberus, Capernaum, the Dead Sea and Jericho. Some of the most impressive spots, Gault said, were the Garden of Gethsemane, the Wailing Wall and The Mosque of Omar (also called Dome of the Rock, the spot where it is believed Abraham offered his son Isaac for a sacrifice).

"I was really awed," Gault said softly, "when I saw the baptism in the River Jordan. It was quite impressive."

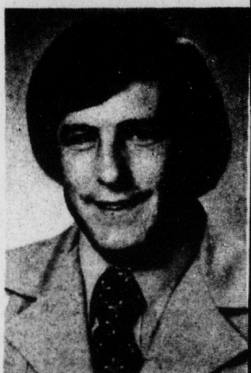

The tour also included a two-day stay in Rome on the return trip where the Gaults saw the Coliseum ruins and toured the Vatican.

"I guess the thing that impressed me most was the people," C.J. said, "the older people still live and dress the same way they did thousands of years ago. You can drive along the countryside and see shepherds tending their flocks just like they did in Christ's time."

The young people though have managed to catch onto the western trend in clothing. Gault said the clothes are much more modern for the youngsters and "mini-skirts can be seen."

Luckily the tour group did not receive any repercussions from the recent conflict in the east but Gault noted, "the area was shelled a few days after we left!"

Jerome Cash of Kings Mountain also went on the tour.
