

Summer Is Waning And Christmas Is Coming

Summer is waning and Christmas is coming. And it's all going to happen before you can get your jingle bells unpacked.

But while you are looking for your jingle bells, the elves at Southern Shows, Inc., are putting together the Southern Christmas Show, the South's annual prelude to the holiday season.

This year the show runs Nov. 10-18 at the Merchandise Mart here.

At the show, you'll find delicious foods, like Austrian strudel, and Moravian sugar crisps, plus decorated trees, ornaments and gifts and crafts by the thousands, educational and entertaining exhibits and features for the whole family. More than 250 exhibitors will be on hand to help you get your Christmas spirit jangling.

Olde Towne will feature a Smithsonian Institute Exhibit celebrating the 100th anniversary of Edison's invention of the electric light bulb. Posters, photographs and artifacts will tell the story of electricity and its usage during the past century. In addition, Olde Towne will feature a four-room recreation of Gastonia's Schiele Museum's Pioneer site complete with people dressed and working much as they would have in pioneer days.

Also, there will be a replica of a train depot filled with authentic railroad artifacts and paraphernalia, an old-time post office, a fire station, and library room. A gnome home, complete with 22-inch animated gnomes modeled after the little creatures in the best-selling book "Gnomes," is destined to be a people pleaser. This year the Craft Village in Olde Towne will be set up under tents like an old-time craft fair. Quilters, wood carvers, potters, glass blowers, and many other crafters, including a flag maker, will be demonstrating their crafts. All items will be for sale.

Another area of the show will feature a clinic presented by Teleflora. Called "Christmas All Through the House," the clinic will feature daily mini lessons by floral designers on making arrangements for doors, tables and mantels.

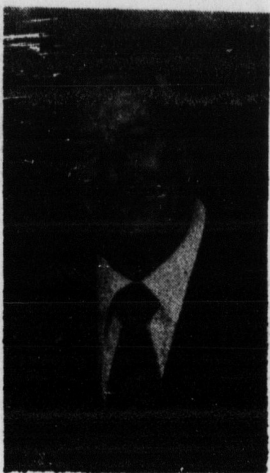

The popular Holiday Kitchen Magic Theatre will be back. And the North Carolina Home Extension Service Clubs will present the best handmade Christmas ornaments from their statewide competition.

And Santa Claus will be there to listen to the wildest wishes of children of all ages.

There's something for everyone at the "Southern Christmas Show." Just bring yourself and your friends. We've got spirit enough to share and a helping hand for the holidays.

The nine-day Christmas festival will be open from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. weekdays and Saturdays and from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays. Admission is $3 at the door, $2.50 in advance; $1.50 for children aged 6-12. Children under six, excluding groups, get in free with an adult. Special group rates are available.

So mark your calendar and plan to attend the show. The elves may even have some jingle bells there.

Gov. Hunt Proclaims "Cancer Awareness Sun."

James B. Hunt, Jr., Governor of the State of North Carolina, has proclaimed Sunday, September 9, 1979, "Cancer Awareness Sunday" in North Carolina.

Phil Ford, former outstanding University of North Carolina basketball player, has agreed to serve as Honorary Chairman of this Task Force on Cancer Awareness of which Dr. James M. Slade, of Edenton, is chairman.

The Governor's Proclamation reads as follows:

Whereas, the incidence of cancer is on the rise and can strike anyone at any time, regardless of age, sex, race, or occupation; and

Whereas, in the past 25 years, the overall cancer incidence rate for blacks rose 8 percent while for whites it dropped 3 percent; and

Whereas, during the same period, cancer death rates increased 26 percent for blacks compared with 5 percent for whites; and

Whereas, some forms of cancer can be prevented and many which do occur can be cured if detected and treated in time;

Therefore, I proclaim

Sunday, September 9, 1979, CANCER AWARENESS SUNDAY IN NORTH CAROLINA and commend this observance to our citizens.

All churches are asked to secure educational materials, films, or speakers for their congregations from their local unit of the American Cancer Society.
