

Tech Given Big Grant

The Cleveland County Technical Institute in Shelby has been awarded $84,387 by the state's Division of Community Employment to provide motivational and orientation instruction to economically disadvantaged, unemployed and underemployed residents of Cleveland County.

The funds, granted under the Comprehensive Employment and Training (CETA), will provide training to improve and upgrade employability skills and allowances to cover living expenses.

The program is designed to remove recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) from welfare rolls through gainful employment and to aid high school dropouts in obtaining skills to pass the GED examination.

The ultimate objective is to either place program participants in unsubsidized employment or to enroll them at Cleveland Technical Institute.

The division, an agency of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, administers CETA funds in 91 counties. It is responsible for statewide planning and policy development of employment and training programs. The division administered $104,612,351 in CETA funds for programs in which 77,975 participants were enrolled in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1979.

Open House Is Scheduled

Open house for the career development center for displaced homemakers has been slated for Mon., Nov. 19, from 12 noon to 6 p.m.

The center for displaced homemakers is located in the basement of Cleveland Tech's Annex in downtown Shelby.

Senator Helen Rhyne Marvin, of North Carolina 25th senatorial district, will speak and officially open the center for the state at 12 noon. Henry McCoy, assistant secretary for the North Carolina department of administration, will assist Senator Marvin in the opening. Ms. Miriam Dorsey, executive director of the North Carolina Council on the status of women, will welcome the visitors along with Ms. Patricia Evans, center director and staff Elle Buse, Ms. Rita Conte, Ms. Cynthia Gardner, and Iola Dillingham.

"We're inviting all persons to tour the facilities, meet the staff and trainees, and find out what we're doing," said Ms. Evans.

The career development centers for displaced homemakers are funded by the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) and are administered by the North Carolina department of administration. The center in Shelby, one of four in North Carolina, is coordinated by Cleveland Tech. The service area includes Mecklenburg, Lincoln, Rutherford, and Cleveland Counties.

Contracts Are Awarded

Cleveland County has been awarded two contracts totaling $265,106 by the Division of Community Employment to provide employment and training to 86 of the counties' economically disadvantaged, unemployed or underemployed persons.

The contracts were awarded through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

A contract for $19,208 was awarded $245,898 to help get jobs and training for veterans, recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), blacks and women. Seventy-six jobs are available in such areas as teacher aide, maintenance, eligibility specialist, maid, social worker, typist, health educator, clerk and radio maintenance.

The Division of Community Employment, an agency of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, administers CETA funds in 91 counties. It is responsible for statewide planning and policy development of employment and training programs. The division administered $104,612,351 in CETA funds for programs in which 77,975 participants were enrolled in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1979.
