Church Pipe Organ

College Receives Gift

DUE WEST, S.C. — Vicksy and Associates of Greenwood, new owners of the former Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church property in Greenwood, have contributed the six-rank Moeller Pipe Organ from the former church to Erskine College.

The Greenwood corporation plans to establish the Twelfth Colony Restaurant in the building formerly occupied by the church. John Pullin of Abbeville, a junior music major at Erskine, first noticed the instrument in the building and brought it to the attention of the Erskine music department.

After Erskine Music Professors John G. Brawley Jr., and Cortlandt M. Koonts had asked about the possible purchase of the instrument, the owners of the building contributed it as a gift to the college. Erskine faculty members, students, and maintenance personnel drove to Greenwood to pick up the instrument.

"We are very grateful for this contribution," Dr. Brawley stated. "We hope that in the future this organ can be used as the major part of a renovated instrument to go into Memorial Hall."

Immediate plans for the organ are to set it up and get it operating, possibly as a practice instrument in Memorial Hall, which is the music building at Erskine.

KM Residents To Participate In Hearing

Several dozen area residents, including government and community leaders, have been scheduled to participate in a public hearing planned by the N.C. Human Relations Council for Wednesday, Feb. 25, at Gaston Community College.

The day-long hearing, one of four planned in locations throughout the state to assess the state of human relations in North Carolina, will take place at Myers Center at the community college in Dallas beginning at 9 a.m.

Other public hearings will take place in Graham on March 4, Whiteville on March 11 and Washington on March 18.

Some 24 people, mainly from Gaston, Cleveland, Lincoln and Mecklenburg counties, have been scheduled to appear at the regional hearing; others will have the opportunity to testify if they register at the day of the hearing at the site by 1 p.m.

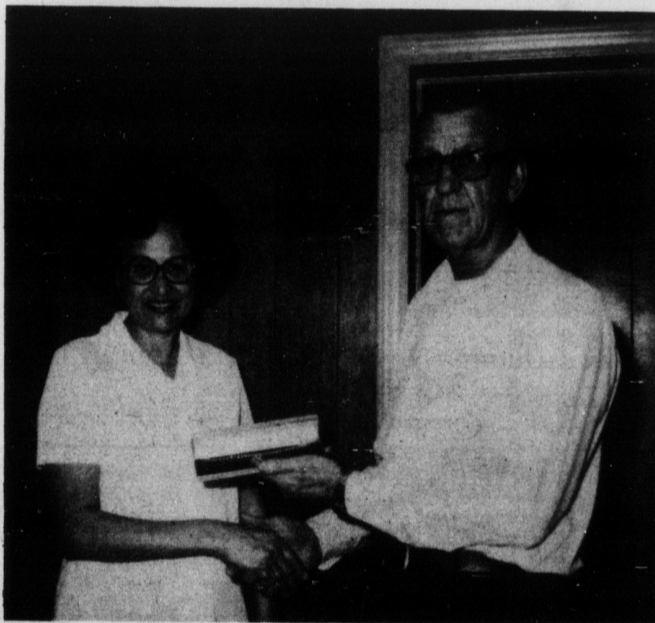

The purposes of the hearings are to document information and focus public and governmental attention on civil rights issues which the council feels need special study or remedial action, according to Dr. Jerry Drayton of Winston-Salem, council chairperson. Broad issues have been defined as community perspectives, employment, housing, criminal justice, extremist groups and education.

Chairman Drayton and other members of the Human Relations Council will hear the testimony and will question participants. According to Dr. Drayton, the council plans to use the information it gathers to make recommendations to the governor and the General Assembly and to suggest appropriate action to local, state and federal officials, as well as to educate and inform the public.

Growth Retreat Is Scheduled

Local Methodist women are encouraged to attend a district Spiritual Growth Retreat Feb. 28th from 8:45 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. in Boger City.

The breakfast meeting will use the theme, "Threads of Discipleship." Reservations should be made by calling the local church offices.

HONORED — Martha Chastain is presented a 15 year service award and bracelet from Claude (Smokey) Butler for her 15 years of service to Tultex Yarns in Kings Mountain. Mrs. Chastain is a winder tender.
