

During Secretaries Week

Fashion Show Is Held

Patriotic red, white and blue are fashionable colors for spring and summer if last week's fashion show during Kings Mountain Secretaries' Week is a forecast of the local fashion scene.

Models presented pretty clothes from Fulton's, Plonk Brothers and Sale Knitting Outlet during the annual luncheon Friday at Holiday Inn to honor local secretaries.

Shirley Gossett, of the Holiday Inn staff, coordinated the show and Mary Anne (Mrs. Paul) Hendricks, Jr. was commentator.

A packed luncheon audience attended the event at which Kings Mountain Mayor John Henry Moss greeted secretaries and recognized them for service to their employers and the community.

Crowd-pleasers were the red linen jacket suit and the white and navy ensembles modeled by Lynn (Mrs. Tommy) Grayson and the sportswear modeled by Barbara Byars. Stealing the show was Lyn Cheshire, who modeled what he said the well dressed male of the community does not want to wear this spring and summer season.

Co-ordinates are popular again this season and the models dressed in costumes which can be worn by the busy secretary during the daytime and, with a minimum of care, double as evening wear also. Mrs. Grayson's tailored red linen suit featured a short, fitted jacket enhanced with straight back-split skirt. The red plaid short-sleeved blouse had a white pique collar. Her jacket dress was topped with white linen fitted blazer. The V-neck dress was styled of navy floral jersey print piped and trimmed in fushia. Mrs. Grayson modeled a navy linen jacket dress ensemble which featured a navy blazer over a white sundress enhanced by white fagoting and bordered in navy. She was also stunning in a yellow linen button front short sleeved dress trimmed in navy grosgrain ribbon with a navy patent leather military style belt as accent.

Modeling sportswear, Barbara Byars demonstrated how one outfit can be worn for all occasions and combined navy with plaid and pink in several combinations of skirts, blouses and pants.
