

This Man Could Save Your Life

ROSS LEFEVERS

Ross Lefevers is a four-year veteran with the Kings Mountain Rescue Squad, having joined after becoming disabled from his job at Lithium Corporation.

He is trained in the use of the Jaws of Life, is a certified emergency vehicle operator, is trained in CPR, radiation, and other skills.

He is a U.S. Army veteran, having served three years active duty and four years in the National Guard. He is chief of the Kings Mountain REACT unit.

Because of his disability, Lefevers said, "I cannot do physical rescue work, but I can maintain good equipment. I got into rescue work after my disability to occupy my time and I thought I could do something for somebody else."

Lefevers, 47, is married to the former Doris Estes of Tennessee. They reside at 614 East Gold Street and are members of East Gold Street Wesleyan Methodist Church.
