May conscience prevail
America's taste for alcohol grown annually, fueled by beer commercials galore. Strong as drugs, destructive as the sun's ultraviolet ray, alcohol accumulatively imperils the liberal imbibers' health. If we would but weigh the fact that, within a 10-year period, four out of every dozen social drinkers will teeter on the edge of alcoholism, as one of these becomes a hard-core alcoholic. These are heavy odds. But even if you remain among the fortunate eight, would you want to have on your conscience the fate of the other four whose misery you helped promote?
