People Take Food

were coming to dump trash had to park on the side of the road because the entrance to the dumpsters was blocked.
 The officers stayed on duty until after 9 p.m. when the Cleveland Container Service took the two dumpsters—which were filled almost entirely with the food—away and brought two fresh dumpsters. Two private cars were still at the scene and a handful of citizens were still watching the goings-on.
 Dean Brown, safety director at Carolina Express, issued the following statement Wednesday afternoon:
 "Our drivers were disposing of frozen foods, this being necessary due to proper temperature as required by the shipper not being maintained. Because of the question of quality control of the product, we were required to dispose of it. There was no contamination, the product had been tested, proven to be safe and in perfect condition, but it had been thawed and refrozen and was still frozen at the dump site.
 It is extremely unfortunate that people will take food from a dump site, because it is assumed that if food has been placed in a dumpster, it could be contaminated from other refuse in the dumpster or from the container itself. The product was not disposed of because it was contaminated but due to quality control. As far as the food being safe and edible, at this point, we do not know because food which has been thawed and refrozen should not be consumed."

 The trash dump is a daily gathering place for many area scavengers, who go into the dumpsters to search for food, clothing and other items.
 One woman, who was upset that she couldn't have the food, was asked why she went into the dumpsters to search for food and other items and run the risk of disease. She said it was because she needed the items and that she was unaware it was against the law.
 However, she said she had never gone to social services to seek assistance.
 Sheriff Dale Costner said Wednesday morning that he had not had a chance to talk personally with the investigating officers, but he was concerned that so much food was hauled away and could be consumed.
 "I understand some people got it and are already selling it," he said. "I hope all the papers and radio stations will spread the word."
 Costner said the department has not enforced the scavengery law in the past, but if the situation at the Midpines dump does not improve, scavengers will be prosecuted.

Fire Dept. Yearly Report

Kings Mountain Fire Department answered a total of 205 calls resulting in an estimated damage of $366,230.00 during 1981, Fire Chief Gene Tignor and Assistant Chief Charles E. (Bud) Ware noted in their annual report.
 The firemen had 784 hours of local training.
 The breakdown of calls included house fires, 26; mobile home fires, 4; vehicle fires, 32; trash fires, 12; woods and grass fires, 49; wrecks, 8; out-building fires, 2; mutual aid, 6; false alarms, 10; and miscellaneous, 56.

The department again sponsored the annual Toys for Tots project, which provides toys for needy children at Christmas. Again, it proved very successful.
 The department also is in the process of expanding its Fire Museum on Cleveland Avenue, adding a 30 by 60 feet room to the back side of the building.
 The department is in need of funds to provide a roof for the addition, and anyone interested in donating may mail their donations to the Kings Mountain Fire Department, P.O. Box 429, Kings Mountain, N.C. 28086.
 "The fire department would like to thank everyone who donated to our Toys for Tots project, and would like to make a donation to help us put a top on the Museum," Chief Tignor said. "And we would like to wish each and every one a safe and happy new year."

communities an opportunity to meet their needs in the 80's. I believe strongly that citizens of Kings Mountain and other communities possess the innovative capabilities and will put forth the resources to accomplish community needs as they deem necessary."
 This may also be the year that the city finalizes plans for the much-talked-about hydro-electric plant for Moss Lake, which would provide enough power to operate the water and waste treatment plants and sell surplus power to Duke Power.
 "The hydro-electric committee has met several times with General Electric representatives," he noted, "and they are preparing a proposal for us, which will be presented to the board of commissioners. We hope to make considerable progress in 1982 to further improve Kings Mountain's utility position."

Moss said the city will continue to work in cost efficiency in city services, and he does not foresee any federal cuts affecting any Kings Mountain programs. Most of the federal money received by the city over the years went into buildings and development of utilities, and not into salaries.
 Moss hopes to see considerable progress on the state's

Highway 74 bypass project during 1982, and although that project will not be completed until at least the fall of '83, the Mayor said he looks forward to the day that pressure traffic will be taken off King and that street turned back over to mostly local traffic.
 "I feel the bypass will be very beneficial to the city, taking into consideration it has two interchanges in the city and two others near the city limits," he said. "It should stimulate industrial, commercial and residential development and will give King Street the opportunity to redevelop selectively."
 Moss said he feels local citizens who have been avoiding King in the past will begin to use the street again, and that will help current and future businesses on that street.
