

KKK COMPARED TO OTHER GROUPS BY SEAWELL

"kissing case" for special attack.

There are other organizations in North Carolina which gain much more publicity than which are for less dangerous than the groups which took part in the efforts to free the two Negro youths sent to a correctional school after an incident involving an alleged attempt to kiss a young white girl.

Among these less dangerous groups, Seawell listed the Ku Klux Klan, the Confederate underground and a new organization in Salisbury called the Black Shirts. He said the State Bureau of Investigation knew the members of these groups and "we know how to deal with them."

Seawell explained that "such organizations are no menace of any consequence to the peace and welfare of the state." He noted that if the Klan were led by men such as those who formed the conference of Christians and Jews, however, "it would be time for us to be alarmed. That time is never coming."

"But some day, we will enter into an age of understanding because there are people who believe in brotherhood and despite greed and prejudice... to these the law is a way of life because it has a spirit which leads man closer to God and offers a way to understanding and brotherhood."

shoulder and ranged downward. He fell dead where he and Patrolman J. I. Stewart were scuffling.

Stewart was shot once in the hand and also suffered bruises and abrasions from the fight.

Officers said Stewart noticed Graham's car on U. S. 74 near the intersection of Maxton, as it weaved across the road. The officer chased Graham's car and tried to arrest the man when he stopped about a half-mile from where the chase began.

Stewart was arresting Graham for driving while intoxicated and driving on the wrong side of the road when the suspect fled into a wooded area.

Stewart caught Graham after running about 75 yards and fought with him. He questioned the man as to why he was going to get his gun and kill him. During the struggle for the revolver, three shots were fired, one striking the patrolman and two hitting Graham.

Officers said three women who were with Graham fled in his car and have not been identified. The car, however, was recovered.

EX-CONGRESSMAN URGES CONCERN FOR ALL RACES to do things skillfully, go the second mile and accord justice.

Justice, he explained, has been the term of the lawyer, spoken of in connection with punishment for crime, but justice now stands for love and not withholding from man the things that are humanly his. The Christian concept of man is that he is God's child and is not affected by racial affiliation.

He acknowledged the frailties of political leadership and the misconception that the majority rules. The majority can be wrong, he stated.

His injunction to the students as they go into small communities, was to be a part of the cosmos, not to worry about recognition, not become cynical, and to never lose faith in people as their potential goodness will be seen sometime. "Develop the powers of the heart, soul as well as the intellectual side," he urged.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Asa T. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company. The retiring president of the company, Dr. W. J. Kennedy Jr., was also present. Music was furnished by the Shaw University Chorus Society.

VA. COUNTY INTEGRALES QUIETLY

County, where resistance to integration has been stronger, chose a different course although it technically intends to comply.

The county's white students, about 800, will remain in the makeshift private classes they have attended since last Sept. 12 when the high school was closed under "resistance" laws.

The private classes, set up in churches, a union hall and a confederate museum on an emergency basis last fall will continue for at least the remainder of the current school term. The operators decided last Monday "the emergency still exists."

Warren County School Supt. Q. D. Gasque and the school board moved quickly to comply Monday night after Federal Appeals Judge Simon E. Sobeloff turned down a final plea to delay the reopening until September.

Mrs. White, mother of five children, denied that she had received the check and on the woman's claims for unemployment compensation, he dis-

Last month, Mrs. White swore out a warrant charging B. F. Shaw, a Seaboard Air Line engineer, with assault on a female. She contended that Shaw complained about the noise she was making while changing linen in a hotel room, then struck her with his fist and knocked her down a flight of stairs.

She said Thursday she still is "receiving medical treatment" for injuries suffered in the incident.

Renewal Development: The talk on renewal development in urban areas was presented by James Shepard, Raleigh real estate man. He said that he believed the Joe Louis Park area would be redeveloped following the clearance of the "Smoky" lot in the central part of North Raleigh.

Registration and Voting: The importance of registering and voting was brought vividly before the group by Miss Vivian Irving.

New Concerns: Speaking on the topic of "New Concerns" was Rev. Robert L. Shirley, pastor of Davis Street Presbyterian Church. These he said were: (1) racial policy at the new Wake County General Hospital, (2) better training for Negro children, (3) desegregation in Raleigh schools, (4) the construction of a separate junior high school for Negroes, and (5) and "pepping up" the interest of Negro citizens in the activities of the local chapter of the NAACP.

The "pepping up" was called to order by J. A. Williams, president of the chapter, who said:

that the meeting was held for the purpose of building interest in the work of the chapter. "Full membership will be accepted at the next meeting," he said.
Rev. Johnny W. Jones, pastor of the host church, gave the invocation.

"KISSING CASE" BOYS ARE NGW IN CHARLOTTE

fare workers investigated the conditions under which the boys would live at their new homes in Charlotte. Their mothers had moved to Charlotte shortly after the incident in Monroe, about 25 miles away.
Madison, Gov. Luther H. Hodges
and North Carolina Atty. Gen.
Malcolm Seawell had maintained
during the litigation and correspondence surrounding the case that the boys would be released as soon as their home conditions and behavior at the training school justified the action.

A Greensboro attorney, one of several attorneys who tried unsuccessfully to force the boy's release, said his first thought was that the matter had now been settled but he would have to study the situation more thoroughly.

Robert Williams, a Monroe leader, had directed the NAACP branch fight to free the boys. He formed and headed the "Committee to Combat Racial Injustice" which was an outgrowth of the case.

Hodges and Seawell accused Williams and others of using the case to their own advantage while being indifferent to the welfare of the boys. Seawell also called some phases of the activity in the case an example of "communists and fellow travelers seeking through exploitation of racial matters and through propaganda to reach into the pockets of people throughout the world to carry on activities which are inimical to and destructive to the American way of life."

AUDIENCE IS CAPTIVATED BY SPEAKER

"Was your God a Spirit who hymns and poetry about human winced at our failures to live up to these words?" he asked rhetorically.

Continuing, Dr. Allen remarked:

"Was He a God who urged Americans to be gravely concerned over the behavior of the Jew toward Arabs in Israel, who urged Americans to shout to the tree-tops about free election in Rumania and Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia but told those same Americans that it is all right to disfranchise 200,000 of 1,000,000 Negroes in Mississippi and thus enact a white man's law to keep them virtually as slaves under the guise of state's rights, while still compelling those same black slaves to swear allegiance to the glorious Federal Constitution?"

Talking through the man of science, the chemist let him say, "He seems to be a God whom we have fashioned for our own convenience, who changes form and stature with every outlook of your pragmatic philosophy."

Dr. Julian said that the man of religion right well read the dialogue between Socrates and Glauccon (Plato's report) concerning the City of God, in giving Socrates' answer to Glauccon, he said:

"Whether such a City of God exists on earth, the wise man will persist himself after the manner of that city, having nothing to do with any other, and in so looking upon it, he will set his house in order."

Dr. Julian was optimistic in his outlook for both the man of science and the man of religion for he said: "I firmly believe that a new synthesis for humanity is possible between the two disciplines, science and humanities."

Introducing Dr. Julian was Dr. K. O. Beatty, professor of chemical engineering at N. C. State College. Invocation was given by Rev. L. E. Freeman.

During the question period, Dr. Julian was asked did he recognize that there were some white people who were good men of religion on the racial issue.

I answer to the query, Dr. Julian paid high tribute to Southern men of God such as his first chemistry teacher at DePaul University, a man from North Carolina. This teacher was the late William M. Blanchard.

One of the questions directed to the speaker was to the effect: "Do you think that people can be taught to accept integration rather than have it forced down their throats?"

Dr. Julian said the history has shown men will not learn except through legislation — be it moral or civic.

Throughout the nation, Dr. Julian is heralded as the nation's most prolific living chemist. It was he who developed the "Wonder Drugs."

Yes, We All Talk

By Marcus H. Boulware

SELF-CONFIDENCE

QUESTION: I seem to doubt my ability when I take the platform to make an address before an audience. What would you suggest that I do to remedy this weakness?

B. L. K.
ANSWER: Self-confidence is characterized by a comfortable posture free from dependence on chairs, tables, and other artificial support. It includes easy movement free from jerkiness, as well as direct, straight-forward, eye-to-eye contact with the hearers; earnestness and energy in the voice; and an alertness of mind which enables him to think on his feet.

On the basis of the experience of successful speakers, the following suggestions should prove helpful:

1. Pick an interesting subject;
2. Know your subject thoroughly;
3. Learn thoroughly the sequence of the ideas you intend to present;
4. Speak aloud as often as you are invited to make talks;
5. Focus your attention on your audience;
6. Be physically active while you speak;
7. Remember that some nervous tensions is both natural and good for you;
8. Never allow yourself to give up.

While self-confidence is important, a speaker must have more to offer. He must have a skill in speaking.

Miss Elnora Smith:

Livingstone Prof Gets A Danforth Appointment

SALISBURY -- Miss Elnora Smith, associate professor of English, Livingstone College, Salisbury, has been appointed as Danforth Teacher for 1935, by the Advisory Council of the Danforth Foundation, Dr. S. E. Duncan, president, announced here today. This initial appointment is for 1 year and carries a sizeable stipend.

The major qualifications for being appointed as Danforth Teacher are: Outstanding academic ability and evidence of vigorous, searching mind; a personality which contributes of constructive, creative effort in the classroom; sound character and integrity; and serious inquiry within the Christian tradition.

Miss Smith is a native of Monroe, N. C. and attended the public schools there. She received the A.B. degree (Cum Laude) from North Carolina College in 1944 and the M.A. degree in Literature from the University of Pittsburgh in 1949. She is working toward the Ph.D. degree in English at the University of Pittsburgh.

The Danforth Foundation was established in 1937 by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Danforth of St. Louis. It was their intention that the Foundation should serve the needs of young men and women, particularly their educational needs, with special emphasis upon the cultural and spiritual aspects of education. Toward this end, the Foundation confines its activities very largely to the area of higher education with special attention to the recruiting and training of Christian teachers in all fields.

Miss Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Smith, of Pittsburg, Pa.

One-third of all blue-cured tobacco allotments in North Carolina are of two acres or less.

City Fights Bias With Tight Laws; Violators Face Fines

SANTA FE, New Mexico, (AP)—Persons found guilty of practicing discrimination in public places, hotels, theatres, restaurants because of race, color or religion, can now be fined up to $300 or imprisoned up to 90 days if it was announced this week.

Last December 17, the city council here adopted an enforceable ordinance barring discrimination in places of public accommodation, resort or amusement.

In 1955, the New Mexico legislature passed a civil rights act prohibiting discrimination in places of public accommodation on a state-wide basis; however, enforcement provisions were eliminated from the state bill before final passage.

The Santa Fe city council's recently passed ordinance states that violators not only will be fined and or jailed, but may lose any city license to operate a cafe, theatre, etc., if convicted of two or more violations within a year.

The more money the average Raleigh family spends in Raleigh, the more prosperous this community will become.

IN MEMORIAM
In memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Harriett Higgs, formerly of Oberlin who passed this "valley of tears" on February 20, 1936. Sleep on mother, sweet dreams. Awake and find them true.
