Leadership Appeals To Washington

Alexander Barnes, veteran newspaperman of Durham, and considered "Mr. Republican" in Negro politics in North Carolina, said here this week that the naming of Attorney Algernon Butler, by President Eisenhower, to be the judge of the Eastern District of the United States Court, was not only unfortunate, but was a moral monstrosity and a political blunder. He did not criticize Mr. Eisenhower, but said that it was another case of him being misinformed. Barnes charged that Butler has not proven his ability to

The city school board voted Wednesday night to continue its policy of segregated school facilities for the 1959-60 school term. Although Clement said he did not know the exact number of Negroes who would seek reassignment,

You Can't Resign: School Board

CHAPEL HILL — The Chapel Hill School Board Friday said it had not accepted the resignation of one of its members who walked out of an integration hearing because the board refused to transfer a Negro to an all-white school. The board cited a North Carolina Supreme Court decision, in a statement issued by School Supt. Joseph M. Johnston, which said the public can compel a public officer to serve. Dr. Henry P. Brandis, dean of the University of North Carolina Law School, resigned Monday when the board refused to transfer Stanley Vickers, 19, from Northside Elementary School to all-white

Carboro Elementary School. Brandis walked out of the meeting. The statement issued by the school board said Brandis' resignation "is not legally effective since the board has not acted on it. Brandis maintained his resignation required no action by the board. Johnston quoted the high court ruling that said "tendering of resignation does not make it effective unless it is

Little Rock Schools In Operation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Little Rock School and municipal authorities went on emergency status Tuesday determined that 1957 will not repeat itself when two schools were opened on integrated basis Wednesday. Admission of three Negroes each to Central and Hall High Schools has been approved by the school board. Gov. Orval E. Faubus had made no move up to now to stop the integration, but segregation leaders said they expected him to act before the school bells rang at Hall and Central. Actually, only one Negro is expected at Central, where the Army was called out to put down violence in the fall of 1957 when Negroes were first admitted under Federal Court orders. The other two approved for that school apparently will not enter.
