NAACP STAGES A MEETING AT CHARLOTTE

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) Evers said that white Missis sipians were concerned very little indeed about attempting to make the segregated schools for Negroes 'equal' until the 1954 U. S. Supreme Court Deelsion outlawing segregation. As in most Southern states, Evers said, Ole Miss has been making desperate strides toward equal facilities in an allout effort to avoid integration of schools, despite the high percentage of illegal clandestine integration prevailing in the state.

Evers spoke of the "two-room pot-bellied-stove colored school Jackson, where the children have to forage for the fire wood to keep The Internal Revenue Service the building, with many panes out, said liens against his estate were warm. (CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) A telephone interview with President Warmoth T. Gibbs, by The CAROLINIAN Tuesday revealed that the investigation by college officials is being conducted by Dean William H. Gamble. The prexy could not tell whether there would be any disciplinary charges brought or not. He also said that the college officials did not know anything about the affair until they read it in

It could not be ascertained what the investigation would cover. Due to the fact that some of the students did not reveal their names it is apparent that some of the identification would be from the pictures which appeared in the local press. It is evident that no legal action will be taken, due to the fact that the local police is said to have watched the incident, but made no attempts to interfere.
