Officers Raid Gambling Outfit Operating As Loan Office; Reaped A Weekly Harvest In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Those conducting a huge gambling business operating behind the respectable facade of a loan company on Chicago's southside were evidently watching the wrong figures last week.

Police believe the men must have been so entranced by the fat figures on their ledgers, they failed to observe the figures of several bums and workmen in the neighborhood.

"BUMS" REALLY POLICE OFFICERS
The bums and workmen were really disguised police officers working under the command of Police Lt. William Graham who kept the place under surveillance for more than a week before staging a raid.

Crashing through the doors of the Panama Loan Company, the police nabbed James Irving, 48 and his brother, George, 53, whom they described as kingpins in a major policy operation, and a $10,000 a week sweepstake game with approximately 5,000 customers.

Graham said the Baltimore and Ohio wheel was operated under the name of the Panama Finance Company and had been under surveillance for a week.

Five phones in the building were used to conduct business with at least 5,000 customers a week, Graham said. Lottery slips, some money, and a floor safe were seized.

$10,000 SWEEPSTAKES
Graham said the wheel operated a weekly $10,000 sweepstakes based on race track receipts.

Also arrested in the raid were Sandy Walborn, 24, and Fred Galoway, 45, charged with possession of lottery slips.

James Irving was sentenced to three years in federal penitentiary several years ago for violation of the income tax law, the government claiming he had defrauded it for more than $300,000.

At that time, Irving allegedly advanced from a taxi cab driver to "king" of the policy in Chicago.

BUSINESS A 'COVER-UP'
Lt. Graham said the finance company was merely a cover up for Irving's policy activities.

The lieutenant said seven policemen, in shifts, watched the traffic going in and out of the building for more than a week.

Some sat on curbs dressed as bums, he said, and others watched through binoculars from nearby hallways and in parked cars a block away.

SHAW FACULTY AND GUESTS ENTERTAINED—The faculty, staff and guest speaker-consultants were entertained at a luncheon during the opening conference which was held on September 15-17. The theme of the conference was "Promoting Competency in the Areas of English, Reading and Oral Expression: A Corporate Responsibility of the Faculty." Left to right are Lenor H. Cook, chairman, division of languages at Shaw, who reported the results of the English Proficiency test; Dr. Moses N. DeLaney, chairman, division of Philosophy and Religion, recorder of the summarization and recommendations; Dr. Marguerite M. Adams, University Counselor, who reported on the results of "Reading Comprehension-SCAT AND STEP"; Mrs. Lucy Herring, supervisor of Asheville city and Buncombe County Schools and reading clinic consultant, who pointed out that teachers must be concerned with youth on all levels with an awareness of their shortcomings; Dr. Bernice Coffee, head of the English Department of Shaw, who presided over the conference; President and Mrs. W. R. Strassner; Dr. Nancy B. McGhee, professor of English at Hampton Institute who spoke on "Promoting Competency in English," and Mr. McGhee, a faculty member at Hampton Institute.

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

As you enter the small office of Floyd Hughes, your eyes take a quick inventory of its furnishings and contents. Besides the executive desk and swivel chair placed near the window, there is a large stationery-supply cabinet against one wall. Two filing cabinets stand on either side of the frosted-glass door you have just entered. The contents of the desk, filing cabinets, and supply cabinets are littered all over the asphalt-tiled floor—and a small box, with its neck broken, lies open on top of the desk, empty.

Lu turn to the man standing just inside the door. "How much money did the box contain?"
Floyd Hughes pulls a bankbook from his pocket, flips it open, and pointing to the latest withdrawal item, says "I drew out $635 yesterday. You see," he goes on, "I employ 22 women who type business form letters for me in their homes. Today they are supposed to come to the office here for their money... which I always remit to them in cash."

The other man, Bert Linder, breaks in: "Don't you think you should be out looking for the man who broke into the office here last night, instead of hanging around here asking questions?"
You shake your head at Linder and say, "The police are already alerted and looking for a man answering the description you turned in. I came here to get a firsthand account from you of what you saw last night."

"Well," begins Linder, "I had dinner last night at the cafeteria on the next corner and as I was walking along the street here, I passed Floyd's building here and looking up, I saw a light burning in his office. Thinking, of course, that he was working late, I decided to drop in for a few words. Coming down the hall toward his office, and before I could open the door, this fellow I described earlier to the police came into sight carrying that little metal cash box in his hands. In amazement, I watched him pry the box open and stuff his pockets with the money. Then I hid in the broom closet as he turned out the office light, and a few seconds later, through a crack in the closet door I watched him walk as unconcerned as you please down the hall, and then down the steps."

"And you made no attempt whatsoever to stop him," you query.
"I distinctly saw his run while he was bent over the desk in the office, and I had no intention of making myself a dead hero!"
Floyd Hughes speaks up at this point. "Of course, I'm insured against such a loss as this... but I certainly hope you'll be able to nail the man Bert described for you."

"I don't know about the man he described," you answer, "but I think I'll take Mr. Linder to headquarters with me—on suspicion of having taken this money himself!"
Why do you suspect Bert Linder of the burglary?

SOLUTION
Your suspicions were aroused when Linder gave the detailed description of the thief, and of his actions in the office. The door through which Linder claimed to have witnessed all this was of frosted glass!

Morgan Freshman Is First In 'Airlift-Africa' Plan

BALTIMORE, Md.—Morgan State College has enrolled one of the first students to arrive in this country under the "Airlift-Africa, 1960," transportation plan which is connected with the African scholarship program in which Jackie Robinson, Sidney Poitier and Harry Belafonte are active.
He is Samuel Geoffrey Okello-Onyango of Kakimba, Kenya.
The freshman student is expected to arrive early next week following an orientation period in New York City.

At Hampton:

Hickory Resident Appointed

HAMPTON, Va.—Miss Alberta M. Webb, 38—8th Ave. Dr., Hickory, N. C., is one of the newly appointed members of the Hampton Institute faculty, according to an announcement by Dr. William H. Martin, dean of faculty.
Miss Webb, appointed as assistant in the department of physical education, recreation and athletics, received the B.S. degree from North Carolina College, Durham, in 1959. For the past year she has been a member of the North Carolina College faculty in the department of physical education.
Miss Webb arrived on campus this week to attend the 14th educational staff institute held September 12-13.

Dr. Jerome H. Holland, new president of the college, addressed the Institute and stressed the fact that the Hampton faculty have a role to play as teachers in the solution of the national problems of the current challenging era.
"Unless we are able to instill within the majority of the student body some ideals, a hope and faith in the future, the larger community will lose a valuable source of potential manpower, the President said.

The twenty-nine year-old student is a graduate of the Maseno High School which is operated by the Church Missionary Society.
Samuel plans to study relations and political science.
In a letter to the college, Mr. Onyango said in part:

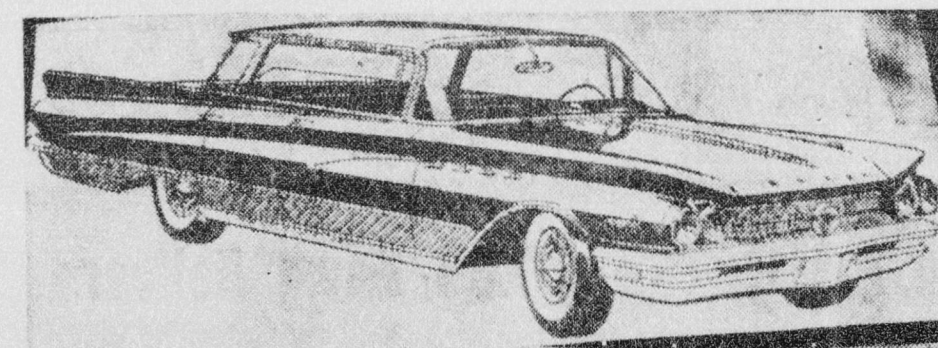

"It is a justified belief that one goes to college to be trained for occupations and professions, but my great need is to go to college to get knowledge which can effectively fit me for a selfless and devoted service to the cause of Africa and the world at large.
"I would like to shape my life to that need."
One of seven children of John and Julia Onyango, Samuel was described as a very active student.

He took part in church dramas at Kamagambo School and was also a member of the choir.
While at Kisii Training School he was nominated as the student principal speaker.

His favorite sport is football—weighing 178 pounds packed on a five-foot, ten-inch frame.
Donations of surplus foods by the USDA at home and overseas totaled about 2.8 billion pounds in the year ending June 30, 1960.
