LEAVING SCHOOL — U. S. Marshals escort three Negro students from McDonough Elementary School, New Orleans, La., after the girls had completed their fourth day of integrated schooling last week. Only four white children were reported in attendance with the Negro pupils at McDonough and Frantz Elementary Schools. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

Four Girls Still In La. Schools

NEW ORLEANS (ANP) — Five little girls dressed in their Sunday best were snatched from obscurity to become the focal center of a week of rowdiness, violence and hate inspired by the court backed "limited" integration of two public schools here. Both Negro and white school teachers are attending state meetings for three days this week followed by Thanksgiving holiday.

But by last week end, though the little girls were still in school, most of their white schoolmates had been withdrawn from classes and violence had given way to court maneuvers to end the limited beginning of interracial education. A week-long school holiday was in prospect because of Thanksgiving and teacher conferences. It was hoped that during the vacation, procedures could be worked out.

ODDS-ENDS

BY ROBERT G. SHEPARD
"Do unto others as you would they do unto you."
CHICKENS WILL COME HOME TO ROOST
The stew the Raleigh School Board now finds itself stewing in is a concoction of its own making. Had this board had the spirited maturity and the intellectual fortitude needed by a group interested with the responsibility of legislating and enacting a school program in accordance with justice, equality and law.

Raleigh thus becomes one of the select 113 Branches in the nation who are paying on life membership certificates. This has been brought about through the contributions and membership of all the organizations and people of Raleigh. John Williams, Jr., is president of the chapter.

BY CHARLES R. JONES
The Wake County Commissioners met with the Raleigh City Council here Monday morning and heard recommendations from the American Library Association on ways of improving libraries in the county and city. Presiding at the session was Raleigh's Mayor W. G. Enloe, who introduced Donald Kimbrey, chairman of the trustee board of Olivia Raney Library, supported by private trust. As he recounted the history of Shaw University, which was founded by Dr. Henry Martin Tupper, Dr. Turner pointed up the hostility and opposition which the late Dr. Tupper encountered from the south as a counterforce from the south as a Northern missionary in his attempt to educate Negroes, first

Cold Keeps Judge Away From Court

DURHAM — Integration suits against two city boards of education, scheduled to be heard in federal court last Thursday, were reset for December 20 because the presiding judge became ill.

Lawyers were notified by Judge Edwin M. Stanley of the U. S. Eastern District Court, that he had a cold and could not appear in court. One of the suits was filed by Parents of Stanley Vickers against the Chapel Hill Board of Education. The other suit was filed as a consolidated action on behalf of 300 Negroes against the Durham School Board.

Both suits asked for an end to segregation in the schools of the two cities. Token integration has already taken place in both cities. Negroes were admitted in Durham in September of 1959, and in Chapel Hill this year.

Homemade Bomb Explodes In 'Mixed' Neighborhood

ATLANTA, Ga. — A homemade dynamite bomb exploded in the yard of a Negro home in a racially mixed neighborhood here Friday night, damaging two Negro homes and two white homes.

Witnesses to the actual explosion could be found, and police said they could not determine if the dynamite was thrown from a car or had been planted in the yard. Lt. A. L. Posey said it apparently consisted of at least three sticks of dynamite. The bomb exploded in the yard of the home of Frank Bacon, a railroad worker. Bacon's 10-year-old son, Carl, was cut on the forehead by a splinter of glass, but no other members of the home were hurt. Windows were shattered in the home of James Moman, a Negro, and in the homes of two white men, John Pyle and James Caldwell.

Fayetteville Scene Of Address By Dr. Mays

FAYETTEVILLE — Speaking before the Southeastern District of the North Carolina Teachers Association on the 1960 convention theme, "A Charge to Keep," Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, world traveler and president of Morehouse College took the position that as teachers it is our charge "To assist our students to overcome the disabilities they have accumulated over the years as second-class citizens." The one-day session was held at the Fayetteville State Teachers College last week.

Dr. Mays continued that "the present scheme is to label the American Negro as inferior, to sell him on the fact that he is inferior, and to set him apart as proof of his inferiority." He was introduced by Dr. W. L. Greene, executive secretary of the North Carolina Teachers Association. The E. E. Smith Senior High School Choir, under the direction of Hubert Walters, presented three numbers. Morning and afternoon sessions were devoted to lectures and discussions which centered about such areas as elementary education, high school education, guidance, music

Manslaughter Trial Set

WENDELL — The driver of a truck which took the lives of two Rocky Mount women was bound over to Wake Superior Court for trial on manslaughter charges last week.

Judge Clarence Kirk, presiding over the preliminary hearing in Recorder's Court here, set the terms.

Rufus Edward Smith, the truck driver, of Statesburg, is accused of manslaughter in the deaths of Mrs. Bessie McCall, 57, and Mrs. Ruth Staniel Taylor, 42. Two others, Mrs. Taylor's husband, Robert Taylor, and a two-year-old son, Ronnie Taylor, were hurt in the wreck. The accident occurred on Oct. 31 in front of Watkins Store, about 8 miles west of here on Highway 64. The heavy tractor-trailer, driven by Smith in a westerly direction, crossed the centerline of the highway and allegedly plowed through the left side of the east bound Taylor car, which had gotten almost completely off the shoulder, according to reports. Evidence was offered which tended to show that the driver of the truck either failed to apply brakes to the tractor part of the facility or that the brakes of the tractor could not be operated.
