Sanders Motor Company Fetes Employees Here

BY LENA M. EURE
 The Sanders Motor Company of Raleigh sponsored its annual Christmas dinner party for employees Wednesday night, Dec. 7, at the Peebles' Grill and dining room. Some fifty-eight employees and guests were present to enjoy this occasion.
 The dining room tables were covered with white linen table cloths and in the far corner of the room a small table-size Christmas tree was gaily decorated which gave a festive air to the affair.
 The menu consisted of half fried chicken, potato salad, green peas, coffee, ice cream and cake.
 After dinner was over a quiz program, directed by Milton Ballentine, took place. He was assisted by James T. O'Neal and Dallas Matthews.

Fayetteville Assigns 28 Cadet Tutors

FAYETTEVILLE—The Fayetteville State Teachers College has just placed 28 cadets on the field for a nine-weeks period of full-time practice teaching, according to Dean Lafayette Parker.
 To be eligible for the actual practice in the business of teaching, the student must have maintained a satisfactory scholastic and conduct record and must indicate promise of rounding into a successful teacher. Pauline Moore is Director of Student Teaching at the College.
 The student-teachers have been placed in four co-operating schools as follows: Newbold Laboratory School with Helen Hucles as principal; the Ashley Elementary School with William McGulley as principal; the Lewis Chapel Elementary School with Charles A. Ament as principal; and the Cheestnut High School with William R. Murphy as the principal.

Man, Woman Kill Each Other With Same Pistol

The last names of famous authors were called and to the person supplying the most first names received a prize.
 The first prize went to Mrs. Bobby Matthews, 2nd to Mrs. Rogers and 3rd Mrs. Archie Walton.
 To the couple that had been married the longest number of years, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Kearney a gift was awarded and the couple most recently married, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua McCormick also received a gift.
 William Jones won a prize for giving the closest year of the establishing of Sanders Motor Company.
 Mrs. Ralph Smith won a scale model Ford for giving the nearest estimated price of a 1960 Ford fully equipped.
 After the quiz a drawing took place. Each employee and guest had received a ticket on arrival and stubs were placed in a box.
 Chester Singletary shook the box up and Victor Peebles chose the ticket. Mrs. Peebles read the lucky numbers. The winner of the first ham was Mrs. Joshua McCormick and Miss Virginia Reid won the second.
 Each lady was given a box of candy.
 Two baskets of food were also given to the needy.
 On Monday, Dec. 19 each employee of Sanders Motor Company will receive Christmas bonuses and turkeys.
 Those enjoying the evening were the families of Mr. and Mrs. James T. O'Neal, Milton Ballentine, Isaac Kearney, Ralph Smith, Johnny Page, Dallas Matthews, Chester Singletary, William Jones, Aaron Hill, Bobby Matthews, Henry Cates, Robert Johnson, Joshua McCormick, Huland Walton, Archie Walton and Rufus Walton.
 Others were: Herbert Harrington, Howard Morgan, Johnnie Perry, Allen Matthews, Richard Moore, Colie Singletary, Henry Percell and Miss Virginia Reid.

stock—mostly the same as balled except they are in cans.
 In the case of fruit trees, it is best to buy trees that have grown in the nursery row for one growing season (one-year stock). The shock of transplanting will be minimized and you can train the tree from the beginning. Now is a good time to plant fruit trees and grape vines. Balled and container plants can be planted any time during the year because transplanting does not disturb the root system.
 Actually, a medium-size potato—boiled, pressure-cooked, or baked, provides only about 100 calories. This is approximately the same number as a large apple or orange or half of a large grapefruit.

Oak Ridge 'Laboratory' Visits A&T

GREENSBORO—Newer techniques in the use of the atom for scientific research in plant and animal life were recently demonstrated at A&T College by a visit of the Oak Ridge Radioisotope Laboratory of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.
 The "laboratory on wheels" was brought to the campus to implement instruction in research programs being conducted at the college by a husband-wife team, the Drs. George and Gladys Royal, professors of biology and chemistry, respectively.
 Their projects, which include student participants, are being sponsored by the Atomic Energy Commission and the National Science Foundation.

Garden Time

Last week I was strolling through a large garden center, as frequently do, to see what was being offered for sale. While examining a rather wide selection of nursery stock, I ran across some peach, apple and pear trees which looked suspicious to me. Upon closer examination my suspicion was sustained.
 These trees were, in the first place, too old to be transplanted with much assurance of survival. They had grown two or more years in the nursery row, making the shock of transplanting unnecessarily great to the root system. And secondly, the selection of scaffold, or framework, branches would have been impossible because of crooked main trunks and sharp angles of the few scaffold branches that had formed.
 While I was looking a clerk came up with the usual, "May I help you, Sir?" I told him "No thanks," but I would like to make a suggestion to him. "Yes, Sir," he said. Then I explained to him the condition of some of the fruit trees and told him how surprised I was to see his stamp of approval tacked to each tree. We chatted awhile.
 The next day the trees were gone. Whether a customer made a bad purchase or the manager disposed of the trees on his own is not known.
 Most nurserymen maintain high ethical standards because they have reputations to protect. Buy only from a source known to be reliable. As a general rule, cheap nursery stock is the most expensive you can buy.
 There are three general classes of nursery stock: bare root fruit trees and grape vines; balled and shrubs; most of the ornamental shrubs, azalea, nandina, hellebore and container (garnet)

Solve a Crime
 BY A. C. GORDON

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE
 Robert Reardon, wealthy lawyer, lies slumped over the desk in his home study, dead. As you approach the desk, you note the articles resting on its polished mahogany surface—a whisky decanter, an empty glass, a bowl of half-melted ice cubes, an uncapped bottle of soda water, and some legal-looking documents weighted down by a gun. The typewriter on the table in back of the dead man holds a sheet of paper and as you bend over this, you read the simple and concise message: "I'm sorry. This is the only solution to everything."
 After noting that the French doors on one side of the room are wide open, you turn and question the nervous-looking butler, who admitted you to the house.
 "I brought Mr. Reardon a bowl of ice cubes at about 8:30 this evening. He seemed to be very worried about something, and I heard him lock the door behind me as I left the study. Then, about a half-hour later, I heard the shot and rushed back. I couldn't open the door and so I hurried back to the kitchen where we keep some master keys. When I returned and unlocked the door, I found him like this ... dead!"
 As you gaze down reflectively at the bullet wound in Reardon's right temple, you hear sounds out in the hall and hurrying out there, you find Mrs. Reardon has just entered the house. You quickly identify yourself and then, as tactfully and kindly as you can, you tell her that her husband is dead.
 "Bob ... dead?" she gasps. "Oh, no—who could have shot him? Oh, it's too horrible! But he surely must have been afraid of something ... locking himself away in his room as he did." And she breaks into convulsive sobs.
 After she has quieted down somewhat, you ask, "Have you been away all evening?"
 "Oh, yes. I left immediately after dinner this evening to attend a movie. Of, if I hadn't gone ... I shouldn't have left Bob alone. But ..."
 "I don't think you did leave him alone all evening," you interject. "I'm afraid we'll have to take you in for further questioning."
SOLUTION
 Before you were able to tell Mrs. Reardon of the manner of her husband's death, she blurted out, "Who could have shot him?" And, although she claimed that she had been away from the house all evening, she knew that his study door was locked. You suspect that she re-entered the house through the open French doors, shot her husband, and faked the suicide message in the typewriter. Her question, "Who could have shot him," was an obvious slip.
