Denials On Group's List

The North Carolina Advisory Committee on Civil Rights has undertaken a study to determine if the state's Negroes get a fair chance at jobs with firms working on federal contracts, how many Negroes serve as court officials, law enforcement officers, and in regulatory agencies in the state and whether Negroes are discriminated against by public and private health facilities in the state.

The Committee's probe into minority group participation in specific areas of the state's economic and public life is reported to be the most ambitious undertaking of any civil rights group in the south. McNeill Smith of Greensboro, chairman of the 10-member North Carolina group, says the latest investigation which it will undertake is a Statewide look at the practices of hospitals and health servicesboth public and private-to find out such things as whether there is discrimination in use of beds, in care given by professional people, and in time given to cases of Negroes and other minority groups. Six medical groups, including the State Medical Society and the Hospital Association, will be asked to help in the survey and evaluate its results, says Smith. The most searching look the committee is undertaking is a check on employment practices among the 1,000 North Carolina firms which do business with the federal government. Studying Questionnaires The committee is now evaluating questionnaires sent to such

These were some of the words used by Ishmael Flory, Director of Organization of the African-American Heritage Association, in his letter to President Kennedy asking him to proclaim Negro History Week, February 12-19, 1961.

Part of the letter further added, This 'racism', based in part upon a long history of distortion, misrepresentation and misinformation about Africa and Americans of African descent, languishes astride America, North and South, to this day, deluding literally millions of the sparsely-pigmented or white population and dangerously distorting the image of America before the world."

Flory pointed out Little Rock, Atlanta and New Orleans and asked the President, "Can these unpatriotic manifestations of the dehumanization of white human beings be divorced from 'racism' . . .? and "While these scenes besmirch our great country . . . national government spends over one
