constitutes the bulk of a Negro newspaper's readers, is very discerning and highly critical. The criteria of these readers is white newspapers. They demand and expect the Negro newspaper to be almost a carbon copy of the white news sheet. They constantly tell the Negro publisher that his paper does not measure up to the papers published by the whites. During the twenty years of the Carolinian's existence here in Raleigh, it has been compelled to make its tedious way facing this type of criticism and appraisal.

We would be the last to that Negro readers of Negro newspapers should not wish for the papers published by members of their race to compare favorably with their race the privilege but that it is also a duty these reader so their race publications. We cannot, however, understand why or how these critics can really expect Negro newspapers to match the white dailies in news coverage, feature articles and displays. Here in Raleigh, the Carolinian is faced with competition from newspapers with a background of experience and resources and knowhow extending back over four score years. It is hard for anything and particularly a 20-year-old Negro newspaper to compete on even terms with something that has been building up over three-quarters of a century.

However, a constant challenge, high expectations and a steady demand for excellence on the part of the public is both healthy and wholesome. These demands and expectations have stimulated the Carolinian to strive for more quality, a higher degree of excellence, a wider sphere of service and a greater desire for perfection.

The Carolinian reading public can help it attain the goals they expect of it by giving it a bigger and more consistently loyal support. The management of the Carolinian welcomes your coming to it with your criticism and suggestions for improvement. You will be able to get the type of paper you expect and want to read much quicker by supporting it with your subscription and by feeling free to discuss with the paper's management any angle of its operation you feel should be changed.

to see the great wrong that is being done both to the state and to Negroes by depriving Negroes of the opportunity to earn a decent living.

We would like to see this pressure being applied first on the governor. We think he has both a moral and a legal duty to act in his capacity as governor to see that the state stops its discriminatory practices in hiring its workers. We feel that if the governor's office was bombarded with letters, telegrams, cards, etc. urging him to take the lead in helping Negroes to share in this state's employment pie, industry would follow suit. Gov. Sanford is your governor. Your votes were largely instrumental in his victory at the polls. You expected him to change the old existing pattern of discrimination because of color. Now is the time to let him know exactly how you feel. Do it NOW.

THE OLD, OLD STORY
Despite the fact that school officials have frowned upon money-raising activities in our schools, we see students, mostly girls, still parading the streets selling tickets for different school activities. This is a vicious, immoral practice, it should be stopped NOW.

God knows our young girls have enough, more than enough temptations to face without being placed in a competition for school honors which are dependent upon the amount of money they are able to bring to the school. No one can convince us that these schools are concerned about how these girls get this money. No one can convince us that the temptation to be a queen has not induced some of these girl solicitors to succumb to the bait offered them by unscrupulous vultures posing as men.

We hope to live to see the day when this unnecessary and degenerate practice can be stamped out completely. With all the hue and cry now being raised about juvenile delinquency the schools that continue to send young girls into the streets to solicit funds are just as guilty of contributing to juvenile delinquency as are the liquor and dope sellers. For our part, they should be dealt with in the same manner.

Belmont Johnny R. Annas, 40-year-old, was sentenced to a year in prison for the slaying of a Charlotte cab driver, was denied by the State Supreme Court.

3rd Man May Die
A third man, Theodore Boykin, 21-year-old farm worker, faces execution in the gas chamber on Friday for rape-murder unless Gov. Sanford intervenes. His attorney, Rivers D. Johnson, Jr., of Warsaw, said that he plans no further legal appeal but was asking Gov. Sanford on Wednesday to commute the death sentence to life in prison.

Boykin was convicted in Duplin County Superior Court last June on charges of raping and slaying Mrs. Lena T. Boykin at her farm home last December 24. He was sentenced to death on both counts.

ASK YOUR GOVERNOR TO ACT
A few weeks ago Gov. Sanford told his news conference that this state's one-fourth Negro population should be given greater employment opportunities. He said that if this were done, the economy of the whole state would be greatly improved. The governor said that he did not believe that any type of pressure or force should be used in trying to achieve this desired end. He left the impression that he would like to see industry in the state see the need for such action and to act accordingly.

We are against force being used for anything. We don't want it used to get jobs for Negroes. We don't want it to continually be used to keep them from getting jobs, force of habit or any other kind. As for pressure, we feel that it is altogether another thing.

We would like to see every ounce of pressure it is possible to use to get the people of North Carolina

Others who took part in the rites were Rev. G. D. McNeil, Jr., Rev. Alonzo McLean, Mrs. A. D. Draine, Mrs. E. P. Williams and Hal Drane. Pat Flannigan, manager of WFPG, joined the many mourners and told of the fine relationship that the two enjoyed. Murphy Bryan, Lillington merchant, also added his deep grief and sorrowful comment.

Flowers Bank Coffin

The esteem in which he was held was manifested by the large number of flowers that banked the coffin, during the rites. The size of the crowd was not realized until the time came to view the body. It was then that more than 3,000 persons are believed to have passed the pier. Men and women, boys and girls, of all racial groups marched by to get the last look at one who had become the idol of radio fans in this section.

A saddened mother, Mrs. Martha, a wife, the former Grace Phillips, to whom he was married in 1950, one daughter, Brenda, 9, and two sons, Samuel, Jr., 8, and Steve, 7, looked on with tear dimmed eyes and gave evidence of sorrowing hearts. He is also survived by a brother, Thessolonia, who lives in Baltimore and three sisters, Cornelius, Joyce and Eloise, all of the home.

May Go To Jury
If the facts warrant it, a true bill will be drawn by him and presented to the grand jury. He was stern in his statement and said that the indictment could run from a capital offense to an assault on a female. It was his conviction that if a crime has been committed, in his judgment, he would push for the full extent of punishment.

Attorney Earl Whitfield has been called into the case and has taken affidavits from several people who are said to have information pertaining to same. In the meantime it is reported that the doctor has left the hospital. He is alleged to have departed Sunday.

father, Capus Heggie, had been picked up by his son, Reddel, along with another son, Wallace, and with William James McDonald and M. C. Wright, started on what proved to be the last ride for the quintet.

The 1955 '56 Oldsmobile, believed to have been driven by Reddel Heggie, is said to have been traveling north on 491 Highway. According to information received by the Carolinian, the driver became weary of the way the traffic was moving and at a point, 8 1/2 miles from Raleigh, attempted to pass on a curve.

He is said to have passed and made his way back to the right side of the road, but the alleged speed caused the car to hit the shoulder and then bounce back into the path of an oncoming U. S. mail truck.

It was then that the mail truck is said to have almost covered the car and when the two vehicles stopped, the human flesh was strewn over the highway and blood was spattered over the ground. Investigating officers termed it the most gruesome wreck that has happened in Wake County for a long time.

Reddel Heggie is alleged to have been on his way from New Haven, Conn., to Lake Meade, Wright, who also lived in New Haven, was stopped by to pay his kindred a visit. Wright's body was shipped to Panama, Fla., Monday night and was expected to be claimed by his mother, Mrs. I. Mae Faison. Funeral services are slated for Friday in

Area Politics Liven Up
As far as Negroes are concerned, politics in the Wake County area has taken a decided upswing.

The election of John W. Winters, a Raleigh real estate operator and a relatively new-comer to the political arena, to the Raleigh City Council last spring, marked the first time a Negro has been elected to a political office in Wake County since the beginning of this century with the exception of 3 or 4 Justices of the Peace.

Prior to Winters' election several Negroes had tried unsuccessfully to land a seat on the seven-man body which governs the capital city. As a matter of fact, Negro candidates have been running for a council post since the change from a commission form of city government was made here in nearly a score of years ago.

About five years ago, Dr. Nelson Harris made an unsuccessful attempt to win one of Wake County's three seats in the State Legislature. Harris ran fifth in a field of eight candidates. Harris' boldness in campaigning for a post which no Negro has held in this state for over 75 years, created quite a stir in local political circles.

Efforts to get more Negroes registered here have met with varying degrees of success.

Before the change over from a commission to the present council-city manager form there were upward of ten thousand Negroes on the city's registration books. These votes were not effective in bringing any benefits to the Negro community because they were largely controlled by political bosses, ward heelers and stoolies. Through the manipulations of these henchmen, candidates were elected who felt that their obligations to their Negro constituents were satisfied by making cash payments to their political bosses.

Under a law, enacted by the General Assembly several years ago, all registered voters who fail to vote during a four-year period are deprived of their voting rights until they register again. This measure had the effect of bringing the number of Negro registrants down to less than 3,000.

Several factors, the Harris campaign, the abortive attempts of Negro to win a seat on the City Council, the awakening desire of Negroes to participate as equals in all areas of living and many other things that caused the Negroes in the Raleigh area to stage a registering and voting comeback. Through the efforts of the various organizations, the NAACP, The Raleigh Citizens Association, Greek letter fraternities and sororities and a newly formed organization, The Raleigh Women's Voting Council, the Negro voting strength was increased to around 8,000 in Wake County.

One of the most spirited campaigns ever waged here saw Dr. Grady D. Davis go down to defeat in a contest for a seat in the House of Representatives of the N. C. General Assembly. This campaign in the spring of 1960, saw Negroes standing in line at the polls for over 4 hours waiting for a chance to vote.

Davis didn't win but his impressive showing had a bit to do with the success of Winters in his campaign for the City Council in 1961.

It was satisfying to note that, for the first time in recent history, the white voters seemingly decided that the time had come for them to help elect a Negro to the Raleigh City Council. Their vote plus the many thousand votes cast by Negroes, resulted in Winters' election.

It is felt that a new day has dawned for the Negro in the political life of this community. By his increasing use of the elective franchise, his emergence as a first-class citizen is assured.

Masons' Past Masters Council Session Here
