GREENSBORO — The Norfolk State Spartans were four points under 100 points a game to lead the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association in scoring during the 1964-65 basketball season.

Norfolk State scored 1,996 points in amassing an 18-2 season for an average of 99.8 points a game.

Newly-crowned champion N. C. A&T led the CIAA in defense, giving up only 73.1 points a game, permitting only 1,681 points during an 18-5 season.

Four other CIAA teams averaged better than 80 points on offense. They were St. Paul's, 92.9 in 18 games; Maryland State, 92.4 in 18; Delaware State, 91.5 in 20, and Elizabeth City, 91.4 in 23.

Other teams giving up fewer than 80 points a game on defense were Winston-Salem State, 74.2 points in 25 games; St. Augustine's, 75 in 18; Johnson C. Smith, 78.2 in 16; and Livingstone, 79.6 in 18.

Incomplete records and individual statistics indicate that either Ted Manning, 6-4 Junior from NCC or James Turk, 6-1 junior from Morgan, will be the scoring champion. Manning has scored 622 points in 22 games for a 28.3 average. Turk has scored 27.0 points a game in 20 tilts.

Top rebounders are 6-5 Calvin Hull of Virginia Union with a 21.9 average and Rodney Looney, 6-4, with a 19.6 a game for Virginia State.

James Crant, 6-3 junior at Norfolk, leads in field goal shooting percentage with a 64.5 percent on 156 of 242 attempts. His teammate, Richard Pitts, sports a 61.8 percent record.

On the free throw line, Fred Lewis, a 5-8 Elizabeth City freshman, is tops with an 83.8 per cent record. Robert Gordon, 6-3 sophomore of Morgan, is shooting 81.7 per cent from the foul line.

Thomas Morris, 6-3 junior at St. Paul, had the season's best single game, 50 points in a 113-95 victory over Livingstone. Manning scored 46 against Johnson C. Smith in one game.

All of the attention this week centers on who will play in the CIAA Basketball Tournament at Greensboro, Feb. 25-27. The tournament will probably produce as many surprises as has the regular season. Upsets have been the key in determining the top eight teams that will participate.

Since the standings in this release were tabulated, front running Norfolk State was beaten by Winston-Salem 110-80 and runner-up A. & T. College has beaten Elizabeth City 109-95. Listed below is a supplementary standing of all teams in the first division. All games through Tuesday, February 16, have been included.

Eagles Bow To Pirates By 75-61

DURHAM—The Hampton Institute Pirates gained vengeance for a loss earlier this season in upsetting the North Carolina College Eagles 75-61 in a Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association game here Saturday at McDougald Gymnasium.

In spite of the efforts of Ted Manning, who contributed 19 of the Eagles' points and during the game broke NCC's individual season's record, the Eagles slipped back from a 33-33 tie-up at the half in the face of the Pirate onslaught.

Manning's 19 points brought his record to 622, six over the previous record set by Charles (Tex) Harrison, who is now with the Harlem Globetrotters.

Roscoe Handy, who was a teammate of Manning's at Carver High School in Baltimore, was pacemaker for the visitors with 23. Following in the double digits were Norman Bonner, 22; Charles Grant, 14; and Marvin Brandon, 11.

The Pirates held the lead throughout the second half except for a one minute period when the Eagles slipped out front 39-38, and a momentary tie at 41-41.

With the game tied up at 41-41, a Handy basket put the Pirates ahead, and from there it was Hampton all the way. The Eagles never got closer than eight points in the remaining minutes.

The visitors were successful with 26 of 51 goal attempts and 23 of 32 from the foul line.

In field goals, the Eagles made 28 of 65, and in charity throws five of nine.

Coach Isaac Morehead's crew equalled the Eagles' 46-46 in rebounds, and were listed with 10 personal fouls to NCC's 23.

NCC runner-up scoring honors were taken by Curtis Watkins, 13, and Albert Conner, 12. The Floyd Brown-coached Eagles now hold a 9-8 CIAA record and an overall slate of 10-12.

SWISH! SKISH

Fishermen who suffer the seasonal affliction of "winter paralysis" in the casting arm should look to active competition to correct the ailment, rather than sullenly mope around 'til spring.

Skish provides the answer, say the fishing experts at Mercury outboards who, from their Wisconsin abode, can appreciate the problems caused by months of frigid weather.

Skish, as a name, fails to convey to most persons what it represents. This may be some of the reason off-season fishing "practice" has never really come into its own, though it is an exciting sport.

Regardless of labels, skish is an expertly devised game that puts an angler "through the paces" — testing his casting skills and pitting them in competition against his contemporaries. In fact, it might be called the next best thing to actually fishing.

Rules and equipment are simple. Use of a school gymnasium for an evening and a collection of old bicycle tires are all that is required. Regular fishing gear — casting, spinning or fly may be used.

Tires or other targets of 30-inch diameter are stationed at distances from 40 to 80 feet from a set casting point. Scoring is easy: drop the first cast inside the hoop and get six points; repeat on the same target and earn another four points. A perfect score on a five-target layout is 100 points — requiring two complete rounds of two successive casts at each target.

While such "dry land fishing" may seem rather tame, it takes a high degree of skill to make a decent score. And, add the guys at Mercury, it doesn't take long to make the members of competition flare brightly.

You may never become a national champion, but a weekly workout on a skish course can make you a champ in the fish-catching department. You've cured that castin' arm itch, and fun has been had by all!
