BY STAFF WRITER
In an ironic twist of fate, neither the victim, nor his alleged murderer has previous Raleigh-Wake County jail records, according to officials of the City-County Identification Bureau Wednesday of this week.
Henry Bumpers, 71, of 14-81 1-2 Sawyer's Lane, was arrested Saturday afternoon and charged with the murder of a man during a fight here early Saturday.
Albert Mason, 39, 111 Boyd Street, Cary, the victim, was pronounced dead at 2:30 p. m. by physicians at Wake Memorial Hospital, a victim of shock and loss of blood.
Several long and deep cuts were found on the victim's face and the back of his neck, but none had reached any vital organs.

Bi-Racial Body Hears Candidate

BY JAMES A. SHEPARD
Virginia K. Newell may or may not be elected to the Raleigh School Board this year, but it would be hard to convince the 200-odd persons who heard her speak at the Bloodworth Street YMCA last Friday night, that she should not be elected to membership on that board.
The March 19th affair, sponsored and promoted by the Bloodworth Street "Y," was considered the kick-off of Mrs. Newell's campaign to become a local school board member. The large, racially-mixed audience, was both enthusiastic and receptive.
Mrs. Newell, a professor of mathematics at Shaw University, and a former math instructor at Ligon High School, evidenced during her address,

From Raleigh's Official Police Files: THE CRIME BEAT

BY CHARLES R. JONES
"Breaks Bad" in House, Gets Shot
Isaiah Whitaker, 38, of 1310 Poole Road, reported to Officer C. C. Heath at 11:43 a. m. Saturday, that he was in his own home with members of his family when Graham Harris, 49, of 107 N. Fisher Street, "dropped in." After a few words, stated Whitaker, Harris produced a wine bottle and threatened to "go upside his head" with it.
Whitaker stated he then pulled out a .22 caliber pistol and shot once, hitting Harris in the lower stomach. The bullet also nicked the little finger on Harris' left hand before entering the stomach.
He was admitted to Wake Memorial Hospital, where his condition was described as satisfactory Wednesday morning of this week.
Whitaker was jailed for engaging in an affray with a deadly weapon. The same charge faces Harris when he is released from the hospital.
Man Admits Breaking Both Of Wife's Arms
Officer B. C. Nipper, of Raleigh's Police Department, was called to Wake Memorial Hospital at 11:37 p. m. Sunday. Upon arrival, he talked to the nurse on duty, who told him that Mrs. Sandra Epps, 21, of D-8 Washington Terrace, had come in with both arms broken.
Mrs. Epps refused to talk, except to say that she and her husband, Elijah Epps, "had a fuss." Epps, who was also at the hospital, told the cop he had broken his wife's arms at their home.
A domestic court warrant was signed by Nipper, and Epps, 25, was placed under a bond of $100.

Dr. Bunche Joins King At Selma

Editor's Note: As The CAROLINIAN prepared to go to press Wednesday, news reached the desk of the managing editor that the marchers "struck out in overcast weather, planning to walk 16 miles to the city limits of Montgomery by evening." This will put them within four miles of the white-domed State capital building, site of a huge civil rights rally Thursday.

SELMA (NPD)—The controversial — an oft-delayed — five-day Alabama Freedom March, covering the 53 miles between Selma and Montgomery, the State capital, was launched Sunday as six homemade time bombs were discovered in the Negro community of Birmingham. More than 10,000 marchers, led by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and under the watchful and protective eyes of Air Force helicopter crews, armed soldiers, federalized national guardsmen, FBI agents and U. S. marshals, began the historic trek early Sunday afternoon, after holding prayer service outside a Baptist church.

In Montgomery, Dr. King is stated to try to get to Gov. George C. Wallace and hand him a list of grievances, which, in effect, will say, "Let My People Go."

As the huge crowd stepped off — eight abreast in the beginning stages of the march — Dr. King was flanked by such outstanding personages as Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, a fellow Nobel Peace Prize winner and a veteran of top-level United Nations service; Mrs. Constance Baker Motley, president of the borough of Manhattan, New York; Dr. Ralph Abernathy, a long-time trusted aide, and famed comedian Dick Gregory. Also in the front ranks were other distinguished members of the clergy from all over the nation. Closeup in the line of march were Charles Evers, field secretary of the NAACP in Mississippi, whose brother, Medgar, was slain in ambush while serving in the same capacity; and Chicago alderman Robert H. Miller. Miller left the line of march late Sunday in order to be present at a meeting of the Chicago city council. He was scheduled to fly back to Alabama to rejoin the march. Miller said local law officials were a "pathetic-looking lot" as the march got underway.

CAROLINIAN Will 'Cover' Ala. Marching

In order that readers of The CAROLINIAN might have first-hand information on the historic march from Selma, Alabama, to Montgomery, Alabama, which is scheduled to end Thursday, it will have veteran newspaperman Alexander Barnes, on the scene to cover the happenings.

Barnes is scheduled to arrive in the civil-rights torn capital Thursday morning and will be on hand for interviews with the principals including Governor George C. Wallace. He expects to join the March outside Montgomery and trek back to the capital, where the march is scheduled to end.

Say Killer Of Malcolm Was Cheated

NEW YORK (NPD) — Norman 3X Butler, one of three men indicted last week in the slaying of Malcolm X, received a check in the amount of $10,000 with a note attached: "For a good job well done."

Joseph Williams, attorney for Butler, confirmed that he had received a check but that it was a phony drawn upon an account closed in 1962. The account had been held by the Harlem Progressive Labor Party.

Butler, now held without bail in city prison, was unemployed at the time of his current arrest and was free on $10,000 bail in the January shooting of Ben Brown, a New York corrections officer.

Brown, an alleged Muslim, had split from the national organization to organize a mosque of his own. Malcolm X, former Number Two man in the Black Muslims, had broken from the sect also to form his own movement.

Indicted with Butler before State Supreme Court Justice Abraham I. Gellinoff, was Thomas 15X Johnson, 29, New York, and Thomas Hagan, 22, Paterson, N. J.
Butler pleaded innocent to charges of willfully killing Malcolm X "with a shotgun and
