Miss Smith Crowned Bennett's May Queen

GREENSBORO — Crowning of Miss Edna Smith, senior, of Hampton, Va., as queen highlighted the annual May Day program at Bennett College on Saturday.

Maid of honor was Miss Gloria Levey, of Columbia, S. C., and senior attendants were Misses Annette Thomas, of Greensboro, and Sandra Vails, of Salisbury.

Other class attendants were as follows: Juniors — Misses Cheryl Bright of Washington, D. C., and Bernadine Harris, of Roanoke, Va.; Sophomores — Cheryl Reddick, of Raleigh, and Beatrice England, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Freshmen — Misses Janice Hendricks, of Kingsport, Tenn., and Gwendolyn Morse, of Ninety-Six, S. C.

Theme of this year's program, directed by Mrs. Cynthia Chivers, was "A Tribute to the Boston Pops," during which singers and dancers performed to music recorded by the Arthur Fiedler orchestra. Among the numbers featured were "Syncope Clock," "Malaguena," "Blue Tango," "Days of Wine and Roses," "Moon River" and "Hello Dohy." Miss Ana Turner of Cincinnati, Ohio, danced "Get Me to the Church on Time," accompanied by a chorus, while four dancers — Misses Essie Lins, of Winter Park, Fla.; Ernestine Mitchell, of Washington, D. C.; Lois Mosley, of Madison, and Edna Walker, of Raleigh performed "Java."

A military guard for the queen's court was provided by representatives of the ROTC at A&T College.

DEAR SALLY

BY SALLY SHAW
DEAR SALLY: I'm a man of 25, engaged to a sweet and lovely girl of 21. I am booked to make a business trip later this month, and my itinerary includes my hometown where my parents live. I thought this would be an excellent opportunity to take my fiancée with me on this auto trip so that she could spend a couple of nights in my former home and become better acquainted with my wonderful parents. However, her mother and father have raised strenuous objections to this idea because of the fact that this trip will include a couple of overnight stops in other towns on the way. Certainly we have enough sense to keep such a trip on a respectable basis, and since we ARE engaged to be married, don't you think my fiancée's parents are being terribly old-fashioned about this? SAM.

properly travel together in this way.

DEAR SALLY: I've been going with a man for seven years, and we've had an "understanding" for the past five years that we are engaged. Up until six months ago, when his widowed mother passed away, he led me to believe that the only reason we were unable to marry was that he had to take care of her. But now he still keeps holding off. He tells me to be patient until he can "work things out." I am completely in the dark as to what these "things" are that he's working out. It's dreadfully hard for me to be patient much longer, because the time is getting away from me. I think I have been more than patient for seven years, and now at the age of 29 I should have some definite pattern in my life. FRUSTRATED.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I agree. You've been much too patient for much too long a time. This man is anything but eager for marriage. First he used his mother as an out, and now it's just "things." I advise you to end this relationship . . . now.

DEAR SALLY: I'm a widow of 39, with three young children. My late husband and I were not very happy together, especially during the final four or five years of our marriage. Am I compelled, in spite of this, to continue to wear my wedding ring, especially because of my children? He's been gone for over a year now, and since the ring has no sentimental value to me at all, I would like to take it off—but I'm afraid this might cause some unfavorable talk among my acquaintances. MRS. R.

DEAR MRS. R.: Whether or not a widow continues to wear her wedding ring is an entirely personal matter and no one's business but her own. Not even the fact that you are rearing three children compels you to wear the ring any longer if you do not wish to do so. As for any possible talk by other persons, ignore it.

DEAR SALLY: I'm a girl of 22, and have been engaged for four months to a very good-looking and charming man of 26. I would be very happy about this, except for the "shadow" that hangs over us. This is the shadow of a girl with whom he formerly went steady for two years. He has told me frankly that he has not yet gotten completely over her, even though she is now married to someone else. He is always bringing her name up while we are together . . .

"Jane used to say . . ." "Jane and I always did this." "Jane loved that kind of music," and so on and on. He says, too, that he's sure in time he will get over this feeling he still has for her, and that our marriage will help him to do this. Do you think I should enter marriage on this kind of basis? I'm getting more and more UNCERTAIN.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Indeed not! It just would not make good sense for you to marry a man who feels such a strong attraction for another woman. I advise you to "unengage" yourself right now.
