(Continued from Page 1) President Johnson signed the bill creating the new department on Sept., 8, 1965, and it officially came into being in early December. In announcing Weaver's selection, President Johnson said that the appointee had been selected from among 300 "outstanding potential candidates." He called the new cabinet member-elect "a quiet, but articulate man of action." The appointment followed swiftly on the heels of President Johnson's State of the Union message, in which he called for the first federal legislation to prohibit racial discrimination in the sale or rental of private housing. The President is of the opinion that such legislation would more effectively attack housing evils than an executive order such as the one signed by the late President Kennedy in 1962, which the NAACP had requested to be extended to cover all banks and savings and loan associations insured or supervised by the federal government. That order prohibits racial discrimination in constructive mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration or the Veterans Administration. Less than one of five new houses are affected by the order.

Girl, 14

(Continued from Page 1) print, told officers she was at her sister's house about the middle of last August, around 6 p. m. Her sister asked her to do some ironing for her, it was brought out, and the sister then left the house to go to the store. The girl said Hunter called her into a back room and closed the door. He then took off her clothes and raped her, she declared. "I hit him in the chest," the child said. She also stated the reason she didn't scream was because she was afraid and three minor children were outside playing. The reason she didn't tell anyone, the girl said, was because it was her sister's husband, and she only revealed the alleged rape after her school teacher told her she was concerned about her and asked that her mother take her to a doctor. The mother complied by taking her daughter to a physician on New Bern Ave. Friday. That is when the pregnancy was discovered.

MAN DENIES FORCE Hunter told the cops he was working on his car outside in the yard and went inside to get a wrench. He said as he walked past the girl, who was ironing, "She flirted at me" and he took her onto a corner of the bed and penetrated her slightly for about one minute. Hunter denied using force or taking off any of the girl's clothes. He said, "She left them on and didn't resist at all." He further declared he didn't believe he could have gotten her pregnant, adding he had not "had anything to do with a woman in over a year." A hearing will be held in Wake County Domestic Relations Court at a date to be set. Hunter is believed to be free on a bond of $500.

Three of the four students who initiated the movement attended the program, including: Ezell Blair, Jr., now an instructor counselor at the Rodman Job Corps Center, New Bedford, Mass.; Franklin McCann, now a development chemist with a national textile firm at Charlotte, N. C.; and David Richmond, who returned to A&T last fall to complete his studies. Joseph McNeill, the fourth is a first lieutenant and navigator with the U. S. Air Force Strategic Air Command and stationed at Ellsworth AFB, South Dakota, and could not attend because of military assignments. In issuing the challenge to students to join the movement for voter registration, Robinson announced that the Freedom National Bank had already pledged a substantial initial fund for at least one full-time Freedom Scholarship to be awarded a student to attend the graduate school of his choice for the most outstanding leader in the voter program. In commendation for the four students who began the student revolt, Robinson said, "This nation owes debt of gratitude for that courage and dignity which sparked a magnificent, non-violent revolution, a revolution as noble and as important as the American Revolution which freed a young country from the bonds of tyranny." Referring to the problems which he encountered during his baseball career, the former Brooklyn Dodger star said he was able and glad to be able to stand up for his rights once the late Branch Rickey had released him from the promise to "turn the other cheek." He continued, "The release was all I needed. I acted ac-there. Since I have now resided there for more than the legal requirement for voting privileges, I will go today to have my voting registration changed. Needless to say, my interest is intensified when I reflect that a great deal of my time and efforts in the past few years were spent toward securing voting rights for my people. Personally, I find it distressing that I and my family are now without representation in the Georgia Legislature. I therefore intend to do everything humanly possible to expedite the seating of Mr. Bond to a position to which he was overwhelmingly voted to serve. "As another recourse to direct action, a court action will be brought about within the next few hours to correct this situation. The Southern Christian Leadership Conference strongly supports this action. "Thank you."

Carnage and five other ladies of the Davle Street United Presbyterian congregation prepared and served a delightful dinner for the men. The Rev. James Allen, and Elder Cliff Brown conducted the devotions. Rev. Hutchison gave the benediction. During the discussion periods, Dr. Elwood (Mr. Presbyterian) Boulware, Durham, who is executive secretary of Catawba Synod Council United Presbyterian Men, briefed the men on the aims and objectives of the Presbyterian Men's Council and what a force for church building it can be if ambitiously presented, stressing that programs must be adapted to meet local needs and that every man must find his place in the operation of the church.

Dr. King

(Continued from Page 1) founding fathers who carved this great country out of strong moral convictions and raw physical courage were dissenters. I therefore find it both alarming and disturbing to find our nation moving on an obviously unalterable course where dissent is equated with disloyalty. "The greatness of America, in the final analysis, is the individual right to protest for what one believes is right and to be able to engage in free speech, a right constitutionally guaranteed in the First Amendment. "It is a little-known fact, but the late President Kennedy is reported in Arthur Schlesinger's recent book, "A Thousand Days" to have said on an occasion: "War will exist until that distant day when the conscientious objector enjoys the same reputation and prestige that the warrior does today." "I find it impossible not to believe that the decision by 184 members of the State Legislature to refuse to seat Mr. Bond had obvious racial overtones. For, by careful examination, I find that many of the persons who voted to refuse to seat Mr. Bond were and are the very persons who have consistently defied the law of the land through their irresponsible acts and statements and acts, precipitated a riot at the University of Georgia. Moreover, there was never an outcry for unseating the members of the State Legislature who, in 1954, so blatantly advocated defying, evading, and circumventing the U. S. Supreme Court's school desegregation decision. "A more grievous error was made by this State Legislature when it decided that the people of Fulton County's 136th District cannot decide who is to represent them in this body. Mr. Bond was elected by 82 percent of the voters in his District, and what this Legislature has done is to arbitrarily decide that these voters do not have a right to decide who is to represent them. "In light of this grave injustice, the Negro community and white persons of good will have no alternative but to engage in creative protest. The Southern Christian Leadership Conference will join the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee and all other persons of good will on Friday in an expression of indignation in the streets. We plan to march on the legislative body that found it necessary to expel a duly elected representative. Our march will be a tribute to Mr. Bond, who on that date, will celebrate his 26th birthday anniversary. However, we will not wait until then to engage in direct action. We will begin now. This whole situation has caused us to see the urgency of going throughout the State of Georgia in a massive voter registration campaign designed to purge the State of political leaders with myopic vision. We will immediately embark on this campaign. "I herewith call upon Governor Sanders to immediately schedule a re-election to fill the vacant legislative seat belonging to the 136th District. I have a personal concern about the lack of representation in the 136th District because I live cording to my own principles, reacted according to my own judgment. I did what I believe was right and I didn't bite my tongue when I felt I had something to say." He said one big lesson from these experiences assured that no intelligent self-respecting colored man can remain aloof from the struggle for equality. Robinson spent a busy day on the campus. Between signing autographs for hundreds of students and visitors, he attended a coffee-hour, which included a question and answer period, was guest of honor at a luncheon at which he was presented the key to the city by City Council William B. Folk, and participated in several newspaper and TV interviews. Dr. James E. Cheek, president of Shaw University, Raleigh, delivered the main address at the annual banquet sponsored by the United Men's Congress on Saturday evening. He told the group that the first Emancipation Proclamation, issued by Abraham Lincoln, was a burden to the white man; and the second, represented in the current revolution, is a burden to the colored man. Taking as his subject, "The Negro's Second Emancipation—Will It Be Just A Proclamation, Or A Reality?" Dr. Cheek told the students, the Negro revolution in this country has just begun. "In order for the current development to be a real revolution, is it not also required that the masses of those affected be helped by it?" he asked, and continued, "If this is the case, the present is only a prelude to the revolution," he stated.

On The Positive Side

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) term as a city lawmaker. During the first years of councilmanic form of government here under Plan D, or at-large voting, common belief was that a Negro would have little or no chance to be elected as a member of the Raleigh City Council. With a strong registration and kept determination to place a Negro on the City Council, Raleigh's Citizen's Association, along with many other organizations, joined victoriously in this effort, along with about an equal number of white voters, thereby dispelling the originally-conceived plan to block a Negro from public office. There should be little difficulty in placing another Negro on Raleigh's City Council in that the acceptance of Mr. Winters has undoubtedly been shown with a three-term courtesy salute to him and his image. There are many competent and able candidates, who, no doubt, will arouse interest among their constituents. The more sizeable registration and far different climate in human relationships here should make it more enticing for those who may have been let down by having lost in former campaigns by very narrow margins. We believe their eagerness for office could be rekindled. We hope so. There are also many new faces, equally as able, to whom Raleigh could look for very able and enthusiastic leadership on the City Council.

Don't let him get to it," yelled Street as he leveled his own revolver at the suspect's face. Wheelous' gun turned out to be a toy model of the .38 calibre revolver. Officer Winters then jerked the car door open, ordered Wheelous to put his hands up, and when he hesitated, he was physically removed from the auto by Mr. Winters. A portion of the money was recovered on the suspect. Police later found the remainder in the rented car he was driving. Winters joined the force 24 years ago, while Street is a veteran of 14 years of police service.

Congressmen

(Continued from Page 1) to seat a legislator, elected by the people, who has expressed unpopular opinions strikes at the very basis of our democracy. The fact that Julian Bond is one of the first Negroes freely elected to a formerly segregated Georgia House is cause for further grave concern on the part of all Americans. Free speech, as guaranteed in our Constitution, means nothing unless it means free speech for the unpopular cause and the dissenter. The rights of every American stand in jeopardy if the action of the Georgia House is not reversed and Julian Bond accorded the seat to which he was elected and which he has now been denied because he has exercised his right to free speech as an American citizen. Spring Coats Are Dazzling Show-offs

Once there was a time when coats were merely cover-ups. Not so now! Many Spring coats are cut "shorter-than-long" to show-off a pretty fashion beneath. "Indeed," notes National Board of the Coat and Suit Industry. Spring '66 coats are show-offs in every respect. Bright and dashing, they are definitely not "born to blush unseen." Never was there such a vast and charming crop of fashions to pick from. It includes skinny or gently full silhouettes, single or double-breasted closings, pastel or brilliant tones. One of these lovelies will perk up a wilted winter wardrobe at the drop of an invitation. Play as You Go

By Mary Whitman The setting is Baker Street. A redheaded visitor is present. "Beyond the obvious facts that he has at some time done manual labor, that he takes snuff, that he has been in China, and that he has done a considerable amount of writing lately, I can deduce nothing else." "Mr. Jabez Wilson started up in his chair..." "How, in the name of good fortune, did you know all that Mr. Holmes?" "Immortal words like these have brought generations of boys bolt upright in their chairs, awed by the powers of famed sleuth Sherlock Holmes. It is good news for Baker Street buffs everywhere that a new dollar hard-cover edition of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes is now available. One of a set of sixteen classics re-illustrated and re-issued by Whitman Publishing Company of Racine, Wis. The new edition contains eight full length stories. Any adult can give a boy a copy of this book secure in the knowledge that it will fascinate him, heighten his powers of observation, and lead him happily along the paths of better literature and possibly better law enforcement. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who created Sherlock Holmes, set his stamp so firmly on the detective story that he remains acknowledged master of the form. During his lifetime, 1859 to 1930, the murky arts of detection and criminology took great strides forward, due largely to the methods he suggested. It is standard procedure today to analyze soil and measure footprints. But it was enough to raise the hair on a wrongdoer's head when Holmes stalked an empty moor, examined the ground and described the culprit: "Is a tall man, left-handed, limps with the right leg, wears thick soled shooting-boots and a gray cloak, smokes Indian cigars, uses a cigar-holder, and carries a blunt penknife in his pocket. There are several other indications, but these may be enough to aid us in our search." That is writing that will last as long as there are boys. UNITED FUND: putting all your eggs in one ask it.
