

Gun Salute, "Taps," Flag

Epps committed his remains to the earth, then a three-gun salute was sounded, followed by the mournful strains of "Taps" and the presentation of the flag to Mrs. Lane.

On hand for the services were the parents of the late 2nd Lieutenant William E. (June) Davis Jr., whose son was killed in Viet Nam on December 10, 1965, shortly after receiving a box of Christmas cheer from his parents. It was clearly visible that the stinging memory of their recent ordeal still lingered heavily on their hearts.

Others surviving Pfc. Alston are: his step-father, Mr. Robert Louis Lane; one sister, Mrs. Hattie A. Moore, two nieces, Little Misses Vicki and Wanda Moore; his grandmother, Mrs. Maggie Blalock; three aunts, Mrs. Lillian Brooks, and Misses Catherine and Susie Blalock; three uncles, Messrs. William Eldridge Blalock, Charlie E. Rivers, and W. Oscar Blalock, 27 cousins, and other relatives.

"It should be three times that this year," the speaker chided North Carolina for its failure to be more active in recruiting voters, "particularly in 28 counties, you should register all eligible and then get out the vote," Clark added.

Clark told of his visit to the widely-heralded Watts community of Los Angeles, Calif., a melting-pot of Deep South refugees, many of whom, he said have become disillusioned by their failure to find the utopia they had expected in the "Golden West." These conditions are multiplied hundreds of times in the big cities of our nation, he said.

"Their cries must be answered (because) this country has no task more formidable, Clark said, adding, "these problems are basically economic."

The speaker said Negro income, outside the South has dropped during recent years, but increased in the South.

Tarheella's NAACP prexy Kelly Alexander, Sr. warned Negroes who "think because we have legislation, the federal government will do things for you." "Well, I got news for you. They ain't gonna do it. You've got to push," and one of the ways he said is to join in the N. C. NAACP Conference drive for 50,000 members and $50,000 during 1966.

During the Friday night through Saturday sessions at the Queen Charlotte Hotel, some 100 adults and thirty youths heard several national NAACP and U. S. Government experts tell of the many opportunities available for improving the conditions of poverty and advancing equal educational training through the many federal programs.

Kelly Alexander, Jr., president of the Youth and College NAACP units, said the Youth group is getting reorganized and hopes to do some active work after falling apart during 1965.

Previously, his father had warned delegates that they must get into politics on an active basis to enjoy the benefits accruing to other Americans.

Security Act.

The policies also violate the equal protection and due process clauses of the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, the complaint charges.

The four complainants, joined by the Legal Defense Fund as a party to the complaint, are asking HEW to grant a hearing on the allegations may be proved, or to issue a regulation saying the "substitute parent" policies of the two states are in conflict with Federal standards and must be changed or the states will face cutoff of Federal funds.

Georgia welfare law considers a man living in common-law relationship with a woman a "substitute father" of any child had by that woman, and hence makes him "responsible for the support and care of his and her children, regardless of whether... he is married to another woman."

By those rules, a common-law relationship exists if the man lives in the home of a woman "for the purpose of cohabitation," or "visits frequently for the purpose or living with or cohabitating with" the woman.

Now it appears the spirit of '76 which freed this nation from England is no longer in good taste.

This small nation was developed by a group of Europeans with their descendants following in air. As they built a prosperous economic unit, African tribesmen came over the borders in greater numbers seeking a better life.

The British took the position that Rhodesia should not be free from England unless provisions were made for these tribesmen to have a big say in how the wealth developed by others should be administered or even if Rhodesia should be independent.

What makes it even sillier is the fact that Britain has always turned a deaf ear toward American requests to impose an embargo on communist nations, including Red China, and Castro Cuba. Yet the Labor government of England has but to whistle, and the U.S. comes a-running. If Andrew Jackson were alive today, he would be dead tomorrow from apoplexy.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS" BY C. WILSON HARDER

Quite a peculiar situation has developed. On one hand, the U.S. is engaged in hostilities in Viet Nam, with American lives lost. No one has yet apparently been able to precisely explain the objectives.

In addition, the Cuban thing keeps cropping up with no apparent settlement in sight.

But with these matters hanging in air, the nation becomes involved in a dispute between England and one of its former African colonies, Rhodesia, about the size of Montana, decided it wanted independence.

Of course, it is not known how many Indians were in the land. But even a hundred years later, after they had been decimated by gunpowder, firewater and disease, at the Little Big Horn, General Custer learned there was still quite a passel of them still around.

But this little nucleus of less than 4 million people, at that time largely of Anglo-Saxon extraction, went on to build a mighty economy for the benefit of peoples all over the world. It is hard to imagine who would have bailed England out of trouble a number of times since then if the Indians, who actually possessed the real estate in the first place, had been able to veto separation from England.

Now it appears the spirit of '76 which freed this nation from England is no longer in good taste.

VETERINARY MEDICINE AS A CAREER

By Bob Bartos, Manager Friskies Research Kennels

If you know an animal-loving youngster who's contemplating college but is as yet uncertain about what career to prepare for, why not suggest veterinary medicine? There's a tremendous need for veterinarians and the need keeps growing as the pet population increases... and as owners become more pet health conscious. More veterinarians are also needed in many areas of research for the trend is towards veterinarians conducting research laboratory tests.

And girls need no longer be deterred from entering the field because of the physical inability of handling large farm animals. Veterinary medicine has become more specialized, particularly in metropolitan and suburban areas, so there's now the opportunity to work with small animals only.

Miss Milton, when interviewed by the officers, said she was working with the SBI out of Fayetteville, and refused to say anything else.

When contacted at his SBI office here, Mr. Huggins said Miss Watson had called him sometime prior to Sunday night and told him that she would "make a buy" on some dope. -- $300,000 to the Southern Regional Council, in Atlanta, to help strengthen state and local human-relations councils in eleven Southern states.

"Both private and governmental agencies in the United States and abroad have a responsibility to shed light on race relations and work toward better understanding and the elimination of discriminatory attitudes and practices," W. McNell Lowry, a vice president of the Foundation, said today. "These new grants, to groups with proven skill in the fact-finding and organizational techniques for this task, are intended to enlarge the informed analyses and recommendations on which governmental action is based."

The National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing will use its grant to expand information and consultation services for local and national voluntary groups, business firms, and government agencies over the next three years.

The committee was formed in 1950, a year after Congress, in the historic Housing Act of 1949, added to national housing policy the goal of "a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family," and directed "the development of well-planned, integrated residential neighborhoods."

Despite regulations against discrimination at the Federal level, in sixteen states and many cities an open-housing market for Negroes is still severely limited.

THE COLD FACTS

An estimated 1,000,000,000 cases of the common cold and other respiratory illnesses occur in the U.S. annually--most of them during the winter months. Sneezing and coughing germladen spray in crowded areas are the major culprits.

"Dry, itchy skin is another major winter discomfort. The skin secretes less oil and loses moisture. The lower humidity in winter; heavy, warm clothing; and overheat homes, all aggravate the problem."

Though medical science has been stymied by the common cold, it has developed a unique bath oil to alleviate dry, itchy skin. Called Alpha-Keri, and available without a prescription, it was recently cited in an important medical journal as the most effective bath oil additive for controlling dry skin.
