

Rockefeller Bros. Fund Gives $35,000 To Committee For Fest Of Negro Arts

NEW YORK - The Rockefeller Brothers Fund has given $35,000 to the United States Committee For The First World Festival of Negro Arts, it was announced today by Mrs. Virginia Inness-Brown, president of the United States Committee.

The Committee, a non-profit, private organization, is charged with sending to the Festival of Dakar, Senegal, the delegation of America's leading Negro artists and specialists as well as works of art. Over forty nations are participating in the Festival which takes place between April 1 and 24, an event which is the first of its kind. The donation from the Rockefeller Brothers Fund will be devoted to the sending of an annual assemblage of traditional African art from thirteen different American collections. Dr. Robert Goldwater, Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Museum of Primitive Art in New York, arranged for the selection of forty-two unique pieces of sculpture for the Festival. Dr. Goldwater is also chairman of the United States Committee's Traditional African Arts Committee.

This American contribution will be an important part of the Festival exhibition of traditional African art at Senegal which will consist of more than 500 pieces, the largest single exhibition of traditional African art ever to be held. Important loans will also be made by African nations and the leading museums of Europe.

The Museum of Primitive Art is the largest single lender of works for the American participation in the Festival. Other institutions which are lending pieces are the University Museum of Philadelphia, the Baltimore Museum of Art, the Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology of Cambridge, Mass., and the Museum of African Art of Washington, D. C.

Other works of traditional African art have been borrowed from the collections of private individuals, including those of George De Menil of Houston, Texas, Eliot Elisofon of New York, Ben Heller of Westport, Conn., Harold Rome, of New York, Clark Stillman of New York and Lester Wunderman of Great Neck, L. I.

The objects from America were assembled and packed for shipment to Senegal under the supervision of the Museum of Primitive Art. The works, some from prehistoric times, originated in the countries of Togo, Mali, Congo, Cameroon, Guinea, Nigeria, Ivory Coast, Gabon, Sierra Leone and Liberia.

After the Festival is concluded, the entire exhibition of traditional African art, including those loaned from America, will be shown all summer in Paris, France, under the auspices of UNESCO, prior to their return to respective museums and owners.

CP&L To Sponsor Atom Youth Trips

Excellence in science will pay off with expense-paid trips to the National Youth Conference on the Atom for two Carolina high school students and their teachers again this year.

Carolina Power & Light Company and other investor-owned electric companies are sponsoring the Youth Conference for the seventh consecutive year. Eminent scientists and outstanding science students from throughout the nation will attend the conference October 27-29 in Chicago.

One student and his or her teacher will be chosen for the Youth Conference trip from CP&L's North Carolina service area and one student and teacher will be selected from its South Carolina service area. A second-place student prize of a $50 savings bond will be awarded in each state.

Competition is open to 10th and 11th grade students whose families are served by CP&L. Candidates for the awards are selected from participants in the physical science division of the district science fairs to be held this spring.

The science fairs are sponsored by the North and South Carolina Academies of Science in cooperation with the public school systems in both states. Details on the Youth Conference on the Atom competition can be obtained through any CP&L office.

Winter!

Some Reasons Why Your Electric Bill May Be Higher.

The days are shorter. Lights burn longer. Families prefer hot meals to cold snacks. So there is more cooking. Heating systems operate around the clock. Cold water has to be heated more to make it hot. Children spend more time watching TV or listening to the radio.

These are just a few of the ways your electric service works more for you during winter. Naturally, as you use more electricity, you expect your electric bill to be higher.
