

Elk Leader

In telling of his experience, Barnes says that he was met at the door by a white woman, who he believed to be the wife of Mr. Jones, and when he asked to see Mr. Jones she graciously agreed to have Mr. Barnes meet him.

It was not very long before Mr. Jones came to the front door and extended his hand in a cordial greeting. Mr. Barnes is said to have told the Klan leader that he wanted to know whether he had received the request and whether he would be present. Jones is said to have replied that he had received the invitation and was seriously considering accepting. He also said that a tight schedule had prevented him from answering the letter. He made it plain that he had to consult his superiors and would give his answer not later than Monday.

Mr. Jones told of his association with Negroes and said that there were many he counted as his personal friends and that should he appear on the panel he would like very much for them to be present. He asked if Attorney McKissick would be one of the panel members and was told that he was being considered along with L. E. Austin, Dr. Frank Graham, Capus Waynick and Malcolm Seawell. According to Barnes, such names as P. R. Jervay, editor of the CAROLINIAN, Tom Jervay, editor of the Wilmington Journal and Dr. A. B. Mosely, whom Barnes succeeded as director of Civil Liberties, have been mentioned.

It is to be remembered that very little had been done about the activity of the Klan in the State until Barnes attacked the organization in a speech at Seaboard in early 1965. He told the audience that the only weapons against the hate organization were prayer and the ballot. When asked what prompted him to go to Jones' home, he said, "I felt that enough prayers had been offered to melt Jones' heart to the extent that he would admit me into his home. I am now sure that they have, for he greeted me in a most gracious manner."

It should be remembered that the Civil Liberties Department of the Elks was the first organization to focus attention, in North Carolina, on the evils of discrimination. It was under the leadership of Dr. Mosely that the first railroad case was taken to the courts and eventually won. Dr. Mosely protested the treatment of a young woman who was given rough treatment when she refused to accept discriminatory treatment on a train and was the object of insults and abuses as the train neared Weldon. The Elks spearheaded the case and the NAACP took it to court.

Barnes does not have the support of all the Elks. A letter, signed by E. M. Butler, Wilmington, state secretary, that the committee on program went on record as being against having any part of Jones on any program. Butler is alleged to have further told Barnes that the time had come to cease agitation and to take stock of the recent gains and the results therefrom. Barnes feels that such a meeting with Jones would not only increase the image of the Elks in the State, but would bring the Klan leader face to face with the issues involved in the fight for human rights.

It was Barnes' opinion that the best way to settle grave differences was for the sponsors of different ideologies to sit down together and attempt to reach a common agreement. It is the thinking of the director of the Civil Liberties Department that the Negro is far from victory in North Carolina and cannot afford to sit on any imaginary laurels, but must pursue every course to gain the goals that are appearing on the horizon. He feels that Jones' opinion and course can be changed if he is exposed to a free and open discussion.

RCA Sets

Rev. Ward succeeds the Rev. John W. Fleming as president, and Lightner takes over the reins formerly held by C. Karl Lichtman.

In a news release dated March 1, RCA had the following to say about the discrimination suits brought against Wake Memorial and Rex Hospitals here last week:

"The Raleigh Citizens Association, cognizant of the fact that discrimination has been practiced at both the Wake Memorial and Rex Hospitals, is greatly disturbed by such practices.

"Any institution supported by funds raised through taxes on both the federal and local levels is violating the Civil Rights Act when an individual is limited to a segment of the institution as at Wake Memorial, or is denied the use of the institution's facilities, as at Rex solely on the basis of color. "The Raleigh Citizens Association, believing in the integrity of the court system of this country in eliminating wrongs stemming from discriminatory practices, fully endorses the action of the Raleigh Branch of NAACP in bringing suits against Wake Memorial and Rex Hospitals," it concluded.

sermon at First Baptist Church Sunday morning as First Baptist celebrates its anniversary. Dr. Goodwin is well-qualified to deliver the sermon. He has studied at some of the leading schools in America. His undergraduate studies and some of his seminary work was done at Howard University and Howard University's School of Religion. He received the A. B. degree from Howard and the B. D. degree from the United Theological Seminary, Dayton, Ohio.

He has done further graduate study at Temple School of Religion Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa., and at Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Winston-Salem, where he received the certificate in psychosomatic medicine with emphasis on pastoral counseling.

Before coming to North Carolina, Dr. Goodwin pastored Zion Baptist Church in Redding, Pa. He came to his present pastorate, The Mount Zion Baptist Church, in 1946. He is presently leading Mt. Zion in the building of a completely new edifice.

The celebration of the 154th Anniversary will make the beginning of the 4-in-1-effort at the church during which time four needs in the church life and year will be highlighted. The anniversary of the church foreign mission day, Men's day and Shaw University day. This emphasis will carry over a period of 60 days and all members are called to rededicate themselves as they look back to the beginning, assess the present and anticipate the future.

J. E. Speed, principal of Carver School, in Wendell, is the over-all chairman coordinating the activities of these emphases. He has worked on the various committees some fifty persons who have pledged full cooperation. It is hoped that the entire membership and friends of First Baptist will be present during the anniversary celebration and throughout the emphasis.

First Baptist has stood for 154 years as the custodian of light for a darkened world. She deserves the attention and support of this community as she continues to give light setting out on 155 years "The Light That Never Failed."

Man Slashed

She is believed to have been faster, however, and managed to get the deadly weapon away from Banks. At this time, police report, Miss Smith approached the victim and slashed him across the left side of his face with the blade.

Clevelle McDougal, 33, of 1608 Cross Street, came into the house at this time, it was reported. It is believed that the scuffle between Miss Smith and Banks was still raging at this time, and McDougal told Mr. Banks to "leave her alone."

McDougal informed the officers that then Banks started to advance on him with the knife, which he had apparently taken away from Miss Smith again, he shot him in the right hip with a .22 calibre pistol.

Miss Smith and Clevelle McDougal signed warrants, charging Banks with assault with a deadly weapon.

They were jailed on that exact charge, however, and Banks was admitted to Wake Memorial Hospital for treatment of his wounds.

The officers were unable to locate the pistol used by McDougal.

A motive triggering the incident between Banks and Miss Smith could not be ascertained.

Both the woman and McDougal will receive a preliminary hearing in City Court when the victim is able to testify.

Banks will probably be arrested on the warrants signed by the pair also.

a full-time director for the men's dorms, better library hours for all students, and a revamping of the college's athletic program.

The students, led by student government president George Langford, had presented the list to college officials on a previous occasion, but had received no immediate action. The class boycott changed the administration's response, and Thursday was a day of negotiations for all. By Thursday night, the grievances had been recognized, students were told that immediate action would be taken, and the boycott was called-off.

Dr. Rudolph Jones, president, said he actually felt that the students could have obtained many of the changes by merely asking, but that he was sympathetic to their desires and held no malice.

UNCF Gives $2 Million To Colleges

NEW YORK, N. Y. - The United Negro College Fund Tuesday distributed the record sum of nearly $2 million to its 33 member colleges and universities, it was reported by James W. Bryant, the Fund's executive vice-president.

The disbursement, totaling $1,955,009, exceeds all previous allotments derived from annual appeal funds, and represents the final distribution of gifts received by the organization during its 1965 campaign. "This money," Mr. Bryant noted, "is desperately needed by our member colleges to help meet current operating expenses. It will be used to expand essential educational programs, bolster scholarship aid to more than 16,000 needy students, improve facilities and build library holdings."

The largest portion of the distribution, $416,012, goes to seven colleges and universities in Georgia. Six institutions in North Carolina will receive $327,030; four in Alabama, $275,184; three in Virginia, $238,788, and four in Tennessee, $233,011.

PUPPIES UNDERSTANDING HELPS MANNERS

By Bob Bartos, Manager Friskies Research Kennels

Be patient with your new puppy. Put yourself in his place. Not only is he in unfamiliar surroundings, separated from his brothers and sisters for the first time, but he can't understand a word that's said in the household. Life will become progressively less confusing when he gets to recognize words and associates them with objects or actions. The more words and gestures he comes to understand... picking up the leash equals walk... the simpler his life is and the better behaved he becomes.
