YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

Mrs. Brenda Mason, housekeeper for the wealthy Jonathan Draper, admits you at the front door of the luxurious home. Her face is flushed, and she seems in a very high state of nervous tension.

"I'm sure something terrible is wrong!" she exclaims. "I've been knocking on Mr. Draper's door, and calling out to him . . . but there's no answer at all. I'm sure he's in there, too, because he never locks the door to his room when he's out. And I think I smelled gas fumes, too . . . please hurry . . . I'll show you to his room!"

You hurry after the woman, who leads you up the stairs and to a door which you quickly verify as locked. You shuffle through your assortment of keys, find one that fits the lock. The door is rather hard to push open, and you find that the reason for this is the small scatter rug that has been wedged under the bottom edge of the door from the inside of the room. The room is reeking with gas fumes, and you hold a handkerchief over your nose as you run across the room, unlock the window, and ease it open -- and at the same time you note the cotton batting that has been stuffed into the cracks around the window.

Mrs. Mason has by now ventured into the room and she lets out a piercing scream as she points to the gray-haired tycoon's body, slumped down in the black-leather-upholstered easy chair. After quickly turning off the gas which has been whistling freely from the fireplace heater, you then verify that the 80-year-old man is dead and has been for at least an hour. A piece of note paper on the nearby desk catches your eye, and you bend over it to read the message scrawled in green ink on it: "Charles Hall is the man who murdered me."

"Who is Charles Hall?" you ask the distraught looking housekeeper who is now leaning weakly against the side of the door.

"Charles Hall . . . oh, he's that gambler . . . came to town a few days ago. I remember, Mr. Draper was very worked up about him . . . claimed that Hall had cheated him at a poker game they were in. Mr. Draper swore that somehow he would even the score with Hall. Mr. Draper was a man of very strong emotions, but I've never seen him so angry as he was about Hall after that poker game. I myself was very worried about it, too . . . Mr. Draper had a couple of heart attacks within the past three years . . . and such temper tantrums aren't too good for a weak heart."

Mrs. Mason now walks hesitantly over to the desk, reads the note lying there, then asks, "Do you think Hall heard something about Mr. Draper's threats . . . Mr. Draper did mention something about going to the police . . . and do you think that Hall really came here, and maybe that Mr. Draper became so excited that he had another heart seizure, . . . and while he was unconscious Hall turned on the gas, and . . .?"

"No," you reply. "Hall didn't kill your employer."

How do you know this?

SOLUTION

The window was locked and stuffed with cotton, and a killer could not have locked the door from the outside and still left the rug stuffed under it from the inside. This has all the appearance of suicide by the hot-tempered old man, and a fanatical attempt on his part to pin a murder charge on a man he hated.

Dick Gregory Predicts More Riots In Summer

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (UPI) - A respite from his "fish-in" stunt in a Seattle, Wash. city jail, on bond to perform last week at the Rochester Institute of Technology, comedian-civil rights militant Dick Gregory took occasion to make some dire predictions.

Gregory saw on the coming summer's horizon, rioting across the United States that would make "Watts look like a pope's picnic."

He and his wife were jailed for staging a fish-in to focus attention on the American Indians' civil rights plight, after they had allegedly been denied fishing rights guaranteed under a treaty signed with their ancestors.

The racist activist, who has been accused of using the fish-in as a publicity stunt, said Chicago would be one of the prime targets of possible rioting, with St. Louis another likely area.

"All we need is one bad scene to touch off fighting all across the nation," Gregory said.

He reaffirmed the possibility that he might run for mayor of Chicago this fall, adding that a major portion of his campaign would be to draw "enough Negro votes to break the Mayor Daley machine, if not win the election."

He added that he would work for the nomination of an "effective" Republican candidate to insure the end of machine rule.

THE VETERANS CORNER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Below are authoritative answers by the administration to some of the many current questions from former servicemen and their families. Further information on veterans benefits may be obtained at any VA office.

Q -- When I purchased my home through a GI loan, I was told that my monthly payments would be a certain amount. Now my mortgage company has notified me of an increase in my monthly payments. Why?

A -- In most cases, monthly payments are made up of principal and interest and a monthly deposit for payment of taxes and hazard insurance premiums. The principal and interest portion of your payment will not change through the life of the loan. However, the monthly deposit to pay taxes and insurance may increase or decrease depending upon whether your real estate tax or hazard insurance premium is increased or decreased.

Q -- Could you please tell me about Orphans Education Assistance? I am a veteran with a 30% service-connected disability and I have two sons who are 12 and 13 years old. I would like to know if they are eligible for educational assistance from the Veterans Administration?

A -- In order for the children of living veteran to be eligible for benefits under the War Orphans Education Assistance Program, the veteran must be permanently rated 100% service-connected disabled. Should your disability become worse, you should check with the VA regional office.

PRODUCT DESIGN AT STATE

A product design exhibition in Raleigh this month will be of interest to both industrialists and Mr. and Mrs. Average Consumer. It may be seen at the Erdahl-Cloyd Union of the N. C. State University campus from March 7 through Sunday, March 27.

Combining-off-the-drawing board designs from major U. S. industries with advanced designs by 4th and 5th year design students, the Product Design Department's show aims to illustrate how the industrial designer is involved in virtually every facet of our commerce and daily life. Underlined too are some of the forces that influence his work - technology, automation, human engineering, function, new materials aesthetics, pure science, production economy, market-ability and the like.

To Meet The Required Standards Of The North Carolina Law YOU MUST HAVE YOUR CAR INSPECTED

THIS IS THE LAW - IN PART

What Vehicles Are Subject to Inspection?

All vehicles registered or required to be registered are subject to the requirements of this law with the exception of two wheel trailers with a gross weight of not more than 2,500 pounds.

Where Will Inspections Be Made?

Private garages having the necessary space, equipment and trained personnel will be examined by the Department of Motor Vehicles and approved to make inspections if they meet all the requirements. There will be no limit as to the number of stations approved and every garage meeting the requirements will be approved. The law requires the Department to check these stations regularly to make certain that the inspections are being made properly.

What Will Be Inspected?

The law requires that before an approved inspection certificate can be issued the vehicle must possess the following articles and equipment which must be inspected by an approved station and found to be in safe operating condition:

- Brakes
- Lights
- Horn
- Steering mechanism
- Windshield wipers
- Directional signals (on vehicles manufactured since July 1, 1953)

The inspection requirements for this equipment shall not exceed the standards provided in the Motor Vehicle Laws of North Carolina.

When Must Vehicles Be Inspected?

Under the law vehicles for which licenses are secured in North Carolina between January 1, 1966, and February 15, 1966, must be inspected and issued an approved inspection certificate according to a schedule that is determined by the last numerical digit on the 1966 license plate:

(1) Vehicles whose last numerical digit on 1966 North Carolina license plate is three (3) shall be inspected and approved on or before March 31, 1966;

(2) Vehicles whose last numerical digit on 1966 North Carolina license plate is four (4) shall be inspected and approved on or before April 30, 1966;

(3) Vehicles whose last numerical digit on 1966 North Carolina license plate is five (5) shall be inspected and approved on or before May 31, 1966;

(4) Vehicles whose last numerical digit on 1966 North Carolina license plate is six (6) shall be inspected and approved on or before June 30, 1966;

(5) Vehicles whose last numerical digit on 1966 North Carolina license plate is seven (7) shall be inspected and approved on or before July 31, 1966;
