BY NEGRO PRESS INTERNATIONAL SHARES WILL

CHICAGO - Loyalty has paid off for ex-Harlem Globetrotter star Inman Jackson, player and assistant to the late Abe Saperstein for many years, When Saperstein's will was probated, it was disclosed he left four per cent of his estate to Jackson. The will also asked that the Trotters operation, begun Jan. 7, 1927, be continued indefinitely.

TESTED IN DEBUT PALM SPRINGS, Calif. - Emmett Ashford, though less colorful than usual, was outstandingly decisive last week in his debut behind home plate as the first Negro umpire in the major leagues. Emmett, noted for his colorful arm-waving calls at first or third base, thumbed down four Angeles and one Cub on strikes and prevented a team clash during the Chicago Cubs and California Angels game. $75,000 PACT

VERO BEACH, Fla. - Maury Wills, the elfish captain of the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers, and baseball's greatest base thief, stole some of the thunder from Dodgers General Manager Buzzie Bavasi and signed an estimated $75,000 contract. Instead of a reported "take-it-or-leave-it" pact formerly offered him, Wills may get up to $10,000 extra. SALARY BOOST

ORLANDO, Fla- The Minneapolis Twins last week gave Jim Grant, their World Series hero and 21-game winner in 1965, a big boost in salary for this season. His new pact, estimated to be about $35,000 is an increase of some $14,000 over last season. CLEARS TRIP

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - Cassius Clay's draft board has rejected his request for a reclassification from 1-A on religious grounds, but left the way clear for him to journey to Toronto, Canada, to fight challenger George Chuvalo on March 29. While rejecting the reclassification, the board voted unanimously to grant Clay permission to leave the country for the bout, as well as the right to a 10-day appeal. FIRST HOMER

PHOENIX, Ariz. -- Willie Mays clobbered his first homer of 1966 last week, as he and his San Franciso Giants teammates beat the Cleveland Indians 6-2. Willie's homer, a typical Mays wallop, was a 400foot drive over the right center field fence of Phoenix Municipal stadium.

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE The home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Seaton has been entered and burglarized during their absence one afternoon, and their old, toothless collie dog, Buttons, brutally beaten to death. "I don't mind so much the cash that was taken . . . or the missing jewelry," cries Mrs. Seaton. "But the senseless killing of our poor old dog! Everyone around here knows how harmless and gentle he was -- he wouldn't have hurt even a fly ... and in fact, he couldn't have hurt anyone or anything even if he had wanted to, because of his lack of teeth. He never was any kind of watch dog, never even a bark for anyone, whether friend or stranger -- but we loved him dearly all the same. I'm glad that our friend, Mrs. Hart, saw the intruder leaving, and I hope that will help you to apprehend the brute who did this!"

According to Mrs. Hart's story, she had been driving past the Seaton home that afternoon and had happened to see a tall, lean, gray-haired man hurrying out of the Seaton yard. You have managed to pin down two men who answer that description. One of them Paul Mueller, lives across the street from the Seaton home, while the other is a house to house salesman of women's cosmetics who had been canvassing the neighborhood that day.

"Surely you aren't even beginning to suspect me!" exclaims Paul Mueller. "We've always been good friends with the Seatons, and as far ... "

"No one is accusing you of anything, you break in. "This is just a routine checkup."

"And don't be accusing me either," chimes in Jim Thornton, the salesman. 'I haven't been in this business very long, and I'm trying to work up a good clientele. This was my first visit to this neighborhood, and if you think I'd be stupid enough to break into any of my prospects houses and steal from them, you're way off base!"

You turn back to Mueller, 'You're sure that you and the Seatons have always been on friendly terms - no unpleasantness of any kind? Be sure to tell the truth now, because if you lie to me, I have ways of finding out."

"Most certainly, we've always been good friends and neighbors," replies Mueller, "Never the slightest disagreement, And as for Buttons, their poor old dog, he was a great favorite in our household. In fact, we used to give him bits of food and meat almost every day when he wandered over to our

"And I didn't even know these people," exclaims the salesman again, "I'll admit I rang their doorbell earlier this afternoon, but when I didn't get any answer, I left right away and continued on my route,. that is, until you caught up with me and started trying to pin this business on me."

You ponder over the matter a few seconds, then point your finger at one of the two men, and say, "You're coming to headquarters with me on suspicion of this crime!" Which of the two men are you escorting to headquarters,

SOLUTION

The salesman, Jim Thornton, The fact that this was his first trip through the neighborhood and that he didn't know the Seatons is the big clue, If he had been well acquainted. he would certainly have known that the dog, Buttons, was perfeetly harmless, no hazard so far as raising an alarm was concern, and that there would have been no need to kill the animal to protect himself.
