Greetings Of NCACT Head

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7) I extend warmest greetings and fondest wishes for a successful convention. Your presence is an indication of your interest in our professional organization. Your active participation in the program of convention activities will assure a rewarding meeting. Certainly the success of the meeting will be determined largely by the attitudes and reactions of the delegates.

Our ever present concern for reaching new goals established by the challenges of change causes all educators today to be more fully aware of the role each must assume if problems are to be solved and barriers removed in our educational system.

In retrospect, we believe that gains have been made during the past year. Many of these might be attributed to new opportunities now available. Yet we realize that, in the words of our Classroom Teachers' National Theme, we are "On the Threshold of opportunity for responsibility." Many new opportunities will come to be accepted or rejected. To gain new opportunities, we must grasp the present ones or the new ones will be lost to us. An exemplary pattern for action has been set by our national president. It is up to us to accept the challenge.

I am grateful for the opportunity of serving as president of the Association of Classroom Teachers and I thank all of you who have supported our work. As intensive and continuing support is eagerly sought for classroom teacher work, to the same degree do we offer our support of the total program of professional activities, for we have a common goal -- that of providing the best quality of education possible for every child in the state and nation. Let us join forces and through a united effort make our objective a reality.

All good wishes for gratifying results when you return to your respective communities with renewed energy and undaunted courage to implement the program of work that lies ahead.

Sincerely,
MARGARET W. WILSON,
President, NCACT
