(Continued from page 1) making in the war on poverty, because "we must be vigilant and be for ourselves." Farmer observed, in a reference to Hill's credo.

On the other hand, the civil rights movement serves to end the Southern white man's tormenting moral estrangement; thus, "we are not only for ourselves" -- an indirect reference to the Hill maxim.

According to Farmer, the fight for racial integration should not lead to "a demand for black dispersal and assimilation."

Essential is "the freedom of choice which will cause any choice we make to seem freely our own," said Farmer, indicating that individuals--Negro and white--must be free to assert their independence or assimilate.

And how will this be accomplished? "Men must achieve freedom for themselves," he said.

Elks End

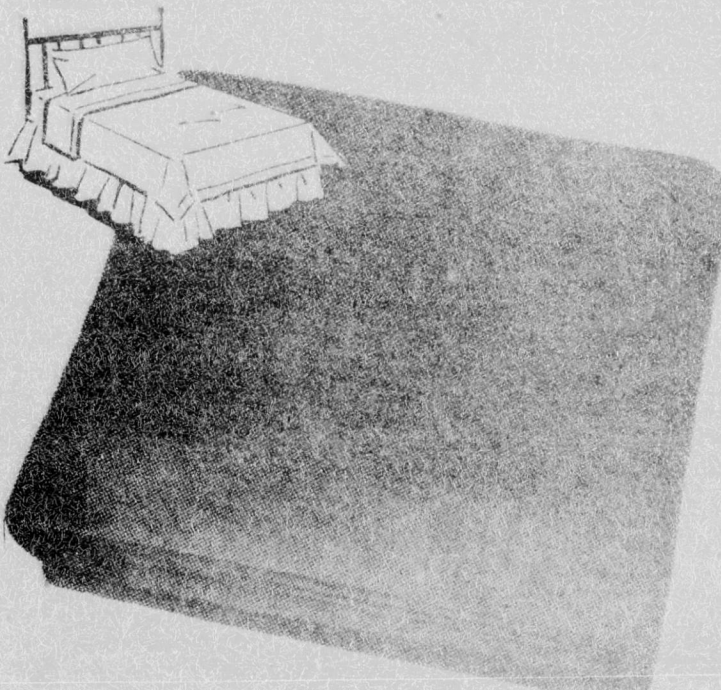

(Continued from page 1) an insight into new methods and processes for maintaining good health Monday night. A pagan, prepared and presented by Daughters Ann Carpenter and Elizabeth Burroughs, was highly informative on health care. Dr. Wilbur Strickland, Grand Medical Director, bemoaned the program with an address. Dr. Jones is also a member of the Elks' health staff.

Grand Exalted ruler Hobson Reynolds, conducted a clinic Tuesday morning on all phases of the operations of the Order, including the way local lodge should be run. He reported that the Order was enjoying its most fruitful years in aid to education, civil liberties and economics.

The highlight of the convention was President E. T. Fazio's annual address given Tuesday evening. He chaired a course for Charity, Education, Civil Liberties, Health and Economics. He assured the members that new barriers had been surmounted and that North Carolina was moving forward.

In addition to getting hundreds of others to enroll for Life Memberships, in addition to the signal honors of top fund-raisers for the NAACP for the title of "Mother of the Year 1966", Mrs. Young and Mrs. Hart will receive all expense paid trips to the national NAACP convention in Los Angeles, Calif. in July. The top organizational contribution was received from the North Carolina Grand Lodge of Prince Hall Masons, Clark S. Brown, Grandmaster. It was a check for $4,000. Last year, the Masons gave $3,000. Their support has been encouraged by such leaders as the Rev. R. I. Boone, Wilmington, Fred Alexander (brother of N. C. NAACP president Kelly M. Alexander, Sr.), Grand master Brown and many other masonic leaders of Tarboro.

Kaplan urged that Negro citizens should conduct their civil rights fight on a high plane so that they may be able to solicit, and obtain, the membership of white citizens of goodwill, many of whom have privately expressed a desire to join the NAACP.

Kaplan reminded the audience that "Talk is cheap, but freedom isn't free." GREENSBORO - More than nine hundred civil rights and education workers gathered here at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, April 30 to hear officials of the U. S. Office of Education outline to laymen the new Guidelines for the implementation of the desegregation program for 1964-65.

Woman Dies

(Continued from page 1) taken to Lincoln Hospital at 9:45 p. m. It was reliably reported that Mrs. Council was suffering from considerable pain. She was treated at the hospital and eventually died from what hospital authorities report as a cerebral hemorrhage.

The arresting officer reported that the woman could not walk steadily and that he smelled whiskey on her breath. It was not reported whether she was given the drunk test or not. The case was called Monday in Recorder's Court and due to the fact that Mrs. Council died Sunday the verdict in the case was "guilty and failed."

The circumstances surrounding her death caused much comment and the matter was aired on a local radio station as part of a public service program. The community was not at all pleased over the fact that the woman was charged with being drunk and those who knew her said that she was never known to take a drink and enjoyed one of the best reputations in the community. She, according to her pastor, Rev. J. J. Carone, was one of the best members of the church and to his knowledge, it over 45 years has proven true to the tenets of the Christian religion. She was also known to have administered aid to those in need all over the city and had done considerable missionary work so much so until she was dubbed an "Angel of Mercy."

The family was not available for comment and it could not be determined whether an autopsy would be held to determine the real cause of her death. In the meantime, rumors are flying thick and fast as to the treatment received and the results. Funeral services are slated for 2 p. m. Thursday from Mt. Vernon Baptist Church.

Mom Tells

(Continued from page 1) plex apartment, separated by a wall and a wooden fence on the front porch. The woman said she had contacted Mrs. K. D. Greene, manager of Walnut Terrace Apts., and even placed an application on file. Miss Quick stated that after she informed Mrs. Greene of the condition of her home she was told that she would need a three-bedroom apartment and could get in the next day.

"However, this offer was withdrawn when she asked me what my husband did and I told her I was unmarried. She then said that she couldn't rent to unwed mothers," declared Miss Quick.

We then contacted Mrs. Greene, who informed us that she "was certain she did not tell Miss Quick she could have an apartment the next day, because I would have had to check the files and see if anything was available. We don't do business that way."

This newsman also talked to Mrs. Inez B. Jones, executive director of the Housing Authority of the City of Raleigh. Mrs. Jones informed us that the city has a policy of not renting to an unwed mother, with more than one child. She did not elaborate.

Miss Quick said she called an official of the Public Housing Authority in Washington, and was informed that the law of the United States clearly sets forth anyone in the low-income bracket, without adequate housing could have it.

She said she called the local administrative office in Halifax Court and was told "It isn't good policy to rent to unwed mothers." She then called Attorney Robert B. Broughton, a member of the Authority, whom she stated, told her he "didn't think it is good for society."

Miss Quick asked the following questions: "Since my children are being denied adequate housing, why should they have to fight for society and be drafted?" These children are not treated any different in school or in any branch of government. Why can a few people rule the law of the United States, when thousands of others obey it?"

She concluded, "It is not right! We are just as human as the ones with 'Mrs.' in front of their names."

Miss Quick said she had appealed to the realty firm, handling the house, for repairs and even called the owner of these duplexes, to no avail.

She is a 1949 graduate of Washington High School here.

100th Birthday

(Continued from page 1) Woods lives, an expensive occasional chair, and many other gifts. At 100, she still has her original teeth, and plants a garden each year which yields a great bounty.

A native of Warsaw, Mrs. Woods moved to Raleigh as a youngster, and has lived at her present residence for seventy years.

She was born shortly after the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation by President Abraham Lincoln. She remembers her father saying to her, "I'm glad you were born free." She has no sisters or brothers, and her husband died 56 years ago. Mrs. Woods then began working as a domestic. Her daughter has worked for the same family for 33 years. Mrs. Wood's final words as the writer was leaving were, "May God bless you."

Teachers Must

(Continued from page 1) chaired the Washington sessions. Like a previous meeting in Fort Worth, Tex., and two others to be held in Atlanta, Ga. and Nashville, Tenn., the NEA conference here brought teachers and administrators together to consider impact of the USOE guidelines on faculty desegregation. The intent of those guidelines, William Holloway of USOE told participants, is "total elimination of the dual school system in this country."

Impressed by the need for speed, the participants from Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, West Virginia, Delaware, and D. C. agreed with Row who asked "How can we move rapidly enough? Touch the right people? Conduct institutes, workshops and other inservice activities for teachers of all racial characteristics to help them in the transfer situation?"

Court rulings on desegregation, said speaker Vernon Haubrich of Columbia University, have gone part of the way, but now it is up to the teaching profession itself through NEA and its affiliates to go beyond "the tokenism which is all we have today."

"Negro and white teachers are seeking the same thing--excellence in teaching. We need each other far more than we realize. The (teaching) profession must put an end to segregated schooling and segregated teaching, or segregated schooling will end the profession," Haubrich added. Several reasons were advanced at the conference for the slow pace to date of faculty desegregation. Said Holloway: "Teachers have followed petty politicians and demagogues in our society who have used race issues for their own selfish ends."

TRANSFER OK'D WASHINGTON - The transfer of the Community Relations Service to the Justice Department has been approved by Congress - 220-163 by the House and 42-32 by the Senate. According to President Johnson, the move will enable the federal government to "speak with a united voice" when called on to resolve civil rights disputes.

Popular Raleigh Divorcee Marries In Auburn, N. Y.

BY PETE HOLDEN AUBURN, N. Y. - A popular and attractive Raleigh divorcee and former St. Augustine's College student was married to an equally popular former Raleigh man, an ex North Carolina A&T College "Aggie," who now works and lives in Auburn, N. Y. The wedding took place in a simple, but beautiful ceremony, in a Methodist Church here, on Friday evening, April 22nd.

The couple, who insisted that the story not be revealed until a later date, were engaged during the Christmas holidays in the presence of this writer, in the living room of the bride's comfortable home in the largest of Raleigh's newest residential developments.

Tabor City News

TABOR CITY - Services were held at Mt. Zion Church, Bennettsville, S. C. Sunday May 1. Sunday School opened at 10:30 a. m. Morning worship service at 11:30 with the pastor and choir in charge. Announcements were made and offering taken up. Next was the sermon. Little Miss Brenda Williams is still out sermonette of the year. Following the sermonet was the message in song.

The pastor then came forward with the message found in Mark 13:9-13, Subject, "Strength For the Christian." The message was taken and the spirit was high. After the message the invitational hymn was given. There were no joiners but the service was enjoyed by all.

After services, the pastor took dinner with Mrs. Williams and her mother. After dinner the Rev. Singletary, wife and daughter motored to Conway to the funeral of the sister of Mrs. N. Elliott who resides here in Tabor City.

SELF-SEGREGATION

NEW YORK - Negro students segregate themselves at City College and Brooklyn College, claims Dr. Phillip G. Zimbaro Social psychologist at New York University. These students do this, he said, because they harbor "built-in feelings of inferiority, and want to minimize social comparisons with whites for fear that their alleged deficiencies may be revealed."

CROW VS DOUGH ATLANTA - Some 118 Georgia school systems stand to lose $97 million in federal funds after failing to comply with the new federal school desegregation guidelines. According to the state department of education, only 65 systems have said they would comply with the guidelines requiring desegregation of teaching staffs and student bodies.
