Dearl J. Webster, Jr., 1517 E. Martin St., resigned his position as a parole officer with the North Carolina Parole Board recently.

This information was made available early Wednesday by Marvin R. Wooten, chairman of the State Board of Paroles. Wooten stated his department had received some complaints about Mr. Webster (he did not elaborate) and an investigation was begun. When the results of the probe were final, Webster quit, Wooten stated.

A graduate of North Carolina College at Durham, Webster taught biology at the J. W. Ligon High School here for approximately three years, resigning in 1963 to work for the Parole Board. His annual salary with this department of penology was $6,324.

He began working with the Board in August of 1963, and was employed there until May of this year. His duties entailed working with parolees from the Raleigh area.

Mr. Webster could not be reached for comment. (See DEARL WEBSTER, P. 2)

A Blessing Or Burden

When the state officials decided to place the present vehicles building in East Raleigh some ten years ago apparently they were unconcerned with traffic jams, narrow streets, school arteries for children and the voting taxpayer of that section.

It is recalled that the old Confederate Hospital stood on this location and later the recreation department had use of it for developing youth of the Raleigh area especially as a baseball diamond. When the state officials found need for expansion of office building space, this location was chosen. Though vigorously protested by members of the recreation commission, the mayor and other interested citizens, state officials moved in with what now will possibly require more land for expanding state buildings and parking space.

As was said then and is reiterated now by this newspaper—should a state building become erected there, shadows of the right of eminent domain would forever hang low over every resident within a reasonable distance. Petitions were attempted to avoid what undoubtedly is an encroachment on the rights of these home owners to a quiet and peaceful environment in their neighborhood. However, none of these people saw fit to sign same, consequently the Council of State was never challenged by the homeowners. Now there is a "crowding" from a radius of at least a couple of blocks.

Property along Hargett Street, no doubt, will certainly have to be bought to widen this narrow artery, New Bern Ave., which now is far too limited to accommodate the great overflow of traffic at certain hours, will or should be developed into a boulevard to the belt line. This would necessitate condemnation of houses and shutting off entry at points to a boulevard from downtown picking up traffic especially from further expansion of East Raleigh, which will include the new Post Office building. If State plans include buildings from the Capitol to the vehicles building, then residents may as well begin searching for new locations for their homes or wait until advised to do so. It seems plausible that time will surely bring this whole area into government buildings in a fast-growing North Carolina.

This paper has no argument with progress and growth and with East and South Raleigh having been retarded in their growth they now are the logical areas for development. However, there should be regard for all the people when plans are laid so that money will be available to complete projects such as the belt line, which after getting to the category of often forgotten South and East Raleigh, just stopped.

With the hospital, the vehicles building, the Post Office building and many more buildings may be expected, the last section of the belt line should be completed without further delay.

In a fastly expanding city such as Raleigh, all of its people must become aware of which way it is expanding, how they may be affected, what they can do to protect themselves and above all how everyone may contribute the most to benefit the general economy and the people's future. These responsibilities must be faced. Alertness, being properly informed, knowing and doing what should be done when it should be done may prove the key to a more astute and looked to South and East Raleigh, for guidance in decisions by State and city officials where people may be helped or hurt.

No longer will only sections of our city find growth. All of Raleigh will feel the pains and delight of expansion. No one can count himself out. Today's world demands that all of us accept our responsibilities and face our foes or friends whatever the challenge in an intelligent, knowledgeable manner. This is our life. All of us must be ready for any eventuality.

Mrs. Julia Brown 'Exposes' Reds And Encourages Segregationists

BY J. B. HARREN

ROCKY MOUNT - As estimated nine-hundred Wilson-Edgemont-Nash counties citizens packed the R. M. Wilson Junior High School auditorium here May 25, to hear and see Mrs. Julia Clarice Brown, the middle-aged colored woman who spent nine years in the Communist Party, who has come and allegedly "exposed" some 100 Communists.

Under the sponsorship of the Tri-County Conservative Club, "both races" were repeatedly urged - by newspaper ads, letters to the editor, news stories and photo, as well as personal contacts - "to come out and hear this great woman," who was heralded as having an important message for "both races" on the issue of "how Communists have infiltrated the Civil Rights movement." Robert D. Scott, a "representative" of the Merck Sharpe & Dohme "firm was leading member of the Tri-County Conservatives, who was very solicitous in encouraging Negroes to attend so that they might "get the message."

Many of the fifty Negroes to integrate the audience were not aware, in advance, that they would be called upon to "donate" one dollar to hear their Civil Rights leaders vilified by another Negro who had left the South (Georgia), and in turn urged her people to remain calm, peaceful and complacent for fear of being led to freedom by those alleged to be Communists. Victim Found By Son, 6

BY STAFF WRITER

Wake Coroner Marshall W. Bennett told a sorrowful story this week of how a six-year-old boy found his mother, a nurse, dead after he had pulled open a screen from a window to gain admittance to his home.

From evidence gathered at the residence and from a later autopsy, Mrs. Juanita Kittrell Peaden, 35, of 801 Hadley Rd., died last Friday afternoon after attempting an abortion upon her self.

Her body was found about 3 p. m. as the child came home from school, but was unable to get into the house. He then pulled open the screen to a front window, entered and found his mother's body in the hall leading to the bathroom, lying face down.

The Raleigh Rescue Squad was called (supposedly by his father, Mr. Willie E. Peaden), as was Coroner Bennett, and the police. The coroner viewed the body, talked to the medi-
