Young Thomas' aunt, Mrs. Hazel Gales, with whom he lived, told a CAROLINIAN newsman Tuesday that her nephew had recently returned from overseas duty, visited her on Friday night, returned to Virginia, and was enroute back here when the tragedy took place.

Injured and in serious condition at Watts Hospital, Durham, is Wallace B. Fowler, 25.

Leazer said Fowler was the driver of a 1966 Ford suspected of racing with a third, unidentified car. Leazer said Fowler's car topped a hill about 12 miles north of Raleigh at high speed on the wrong side of the road and ran into the car carrying Thomas and Christmas.

Both cars were total losses, Leazer said. The car in which the dead men rode was a 1966 Mustang with 614 miles registered on the speedometer, Leazer said.

The patrolman said no charge had been brought pending completion of the investigation.

Funeral services for both . young servicemen will be conducted here Thursday afternoon.

Non-Vicious Cycle Seen

LOS ANGELES - Roy Wukins. executive director of the NA-ACP, has challenged the American business community to produce a better society through the working of an economic theory he calls "the non-vicious cycle."

Wilkins delivered the challenge in a speech at the 1966 Old Charter Scholar ships award luncheon at the Internation al Hotel here last week, where he assisted in the presentation of two scholarships for graduate study to a pair of Negro students who wish to pursue careers in business.

Some 200 business, educational, community and civil rights leaders heard the NA-ACP official explain the reasoning behind his theory, namely that "if the Negro profits, American business profits.'

Wilkins epitomized his "nonvicious cycle" theory as follows: "The better the education, the better the job opportunities. The better the iob opportunity, the better the income. The better the income, the better the purchasing power. The better the purchasing power, the better the national economy. The better the national economy, the better the job opportunities. The better the job opportunities, the better the opportunities for better ed And so she then accompanied the woman and their male companion to the A&P Food Store, which faces E. Hargett St., where she was to confer with the socalled boss man. She and the man sat directly across from the store in a park while the woman went inside.

The young woman, Mrs. Henderson said, returned to them a short time later, saying her boss, "Mr. White," wanted Mrs. Henderson and the man to give him some money not to talk about it, then they could split the supposed "big find."

She took wallets from Mrs. Henderson and the man, but cam back in a few minutestelling the man he could go inside the store and get his billfold back from "Mr. White."

After another short period, the man came out of the store and informed Mrs. Henderson that it was her turn to get her pocketbook back.

She entered A&P, asked for "Mr. White," was told no one worked there by that name, and rushed out, only to find that the duo had ducked her.

Mrs. Henderson not only lost $35 in her wallet, but identification cards and her driver's license as well.

Police are searching for the mystery pair.

ing lists for the primary. While there are less than 1,500 qualified white voters living in the county, at least 1,789 whites cast ballots, the suit charges.

Further, the suit alleges that illiterate Negro voters were not allowed to use sample ballots to help them cast their votes, although white illiterates were granted that privilege.

Unable to use sample ballots, illiterate Negroes had to turn to voting officials for help in marking their ballots, accord-ing to the complaint. In many instances, white voting officials refused to mark the ballots of illiterate Negroes for Negro candidates, and instead marked them for white candidates, the suit charges.

The complaint said that of about 100 election officials named by an Appointing Board supervised by Judge Herndon, only four were chosen from lists submitted by Negro candidates. Legal Defense Fund lawyers asked for a temporary restraining order to prevent alteration or destruction of voting lists, ballots or other records pertaining to the primary pending a hearing on the suit. The plaintiffs who were candidates in the primary are

Officers reported Mrs. Peaden, a registered nurse, believed to have been employed at Wake Memorial Hospital, was clad in a housecoat, inside of which was a hypodermic needle. This needle appeared to have been rinsed, said the officers. Coroner Bennett said a small rubber tube was protruding about 14 inches out of her body

Nothing could be found in the house which might have been uate, is one of five children used in the hypodermic, it was claimed. At the hospital, it was discovered that air was in Mrs. Peaden's body.

Mr. Peaden told investigators that his wife had told him she was pregnant, after undergoing a rabbit test Saturday before last.

The husband also told the coroner that Mrs. Peaden said she was scared and did not want to have another child. Coroner Bennett said Mrs. Peaden was a rather stout person and indicated that this could have added to her fear of another pregnancy. Funeral services were held Sunday at 1 p. m. at First Baptist Church here with Rev. J. H. Clanton officiating and burial followed in Kittrell Cemetery, in Kittrell.

NAPE Holds Memorial Service Here

BY WILBERT M. SANDERS The National Alliance of Postal Employees held its Annual Memorial Service Sunday, May 15, at the Martin St. Baptist Church of which Dr. Paul H. Johnson is minister. As is customary, each member was accompanied by his immediate family. An official welcome was extended to the members by Dr. Johnson, who also delivered a most inspiring message.

Dr. Johnson spoke of one man named Peter the Apostle who was so good that certain people were healed by only having his shadow fall upon them. He admonished the congregation as to what kind of shadows they were casting, good shadows or bad ones. In other words. he was telling them to so let their lights shine before men and the world that others would take heed and give Glory to the Father. Immediately following the morning services, members of the Alliance were taken on a tour of the beautifully remodeled edifice. Only through love for God and faithful cocperation could such a fine job have been accomplished.
