WIDOW TO SUE IN "WRONGFUL DEATH"

Deadwyler Jury Says 'Accident'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - A "wrongful death" suit will be filed by the widow of a Negro motorist fatally shot by a white policeman. The death was ruled accidentally in a coroner's inquest.

Leonard Deadwyler, 27, was fatally shot by patrolman Jerold M. Bova, 23, following an auto chase.

Bova testified that his service revolver fired accidentally when the car suddenly lurched forward.

But Mrs. Deadwyler denied that the car moved, adding that her husband was taking her to the hospital because she thought she was in labor.

The case was the source of racial tension both at the scene of the inquest and in riot-scarred Watts.

However, the Negro community appeared to have accepted the verdict calmly.

Firebombs were hurled and a policeman was shot at, but no major outbreaks were reported. (See WIDOW TO, P. 2)

WILL SUE IN HUSBAND'S 'WRONGFUL DEATH' - Los Angeles: Mrs. Barbara Deadwyler, 27, center, and her two children, Leonard, Jr., 2 1/2, and Cheryl, 8, sit in the living room of their home last week, shortly after a coroner's jury ruled that the death of her husband at the hands of an L. A. cop was "accidental homicide." Mrs. Deadwyler said, "I'm glad it's over." Her attorney, Johnny L. Cochran, said the family will now file suit against the city under the "Wrongful Death Act." LBJ's Civil Rights Are Long Way Off

Over 200 In DC For 2-Day Meet

BY ALEXANDER BARNES
WASHINGTON, D. C. - Most of the more than 2,400 delegates and the more than 400 newspapermen who attended the two-day conference, called by Lyndon B. Johnson, to "Fulfill These Rights," along with many critics in and out of government, are not much closer to the realization of the President's dream than they were when the sessions opened at the Sheraton-Park Hotel, last Wednesday.

Floyd McKissick, CORE head, stormed into town saying the meeting was "rigged." He threw a cog into the wheel as early as Tuesday night and vowed to take 1500 delegates out of the huge ballroom if the planners did not make it an open meeting. He is said to have won some points, but is believed to have not succeeded in making the Vietnam war a serious concern of the conference, as it relates to the issue of civil rights.

The issue was tossed back and forth in many of the sessions and many of the speakers attempted to say Johnson was "rigged." (See LBJ'S RIGHTS, P. 2)

AT WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE - Washington: The White House Conference on Negro Rights opened at the Sheraton-Park Hotel June 1 with a warning from Vice-President Hubert Humphrey that 20 million American Negroes are impatient for full participation in the fruits of America's affluent society and will no longer be "pacified" with token progress. Attending the conference are, l. to r.: Bayard Rustin, New York; Gerald A. Lamb, Connecticut State Treasurer; J. H. Jackson, Chicago; Lemuel Wells, special assistant to the Mayor of Boston, and Bill Russell, new coach of the Boston Celtics basketball team. (UPI PHOTO)

Richard C. Watson, 21, of 1005 S. Person St., admitted to the writer his embarrassment when Highway Patrolman R. Y. Allen, would not allow him to make a turn, although he allowed all of the white motorists in front of Watson to make the same exit off the highway, leading to the State Fairgrounds.

The incident occurred on Friday, June 3, about 6 p. m. as Watson was leaving his job. He had plans for attending a huge public fish fry, held in

THE CRIME BEAT

BY CHARLES R. JONES

Wife's Nose Is Hurt By Hubby

Mrs. Maggie Smith Buffalo, 54, of 1609 E. Edenton St., reported to Officer W. M. Parker, Jr., at 10:03 a. m. Monday at Wake Memorial Hospital that she was being treated for a nose injury.

The extent of the injury, it was learned, would not be available until X-rays were completed.

The woman declared her husband, Sol Buffalo, 67, same address, hit her on the nose with a chair during a domestic quarrel over some money.

A warrant was signed and Sol Buffalo was "hauled off" to Wake County Jail on an assault with a deadly weapon rap and placed under a bond of $100.

Blade In Chest Kills Her 'Love'

Lonnie Everett Atwater was a big man. He stood 6 feet, three inches in his stockinged feet, and weighed over 200 pounds. Ironically, his downfall came at the hands of the woman he loved and had dated for some time. She plunged a knife into his left chest wall at about 9:25 p. m. last Saturday, following a heated argument. Miss Shirley Ann White, 22, the defendant, is out on a $500 bond.

Atwater, 22, of 209 Lincoln Court, was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Atwater. His father is a former school teacher and his mother is now employed at the Cary Elementary School.

Nurse Barbara Edwards was on duty at Wake Memorial Hospital and informed officers answering her call, a short time earlier, that young Atwater's body had arrived there and he was dead on arrival of a single stab wound in the left chest wall.

Miss White, 23, of 1024 Manly St., rushed Atwater to the hospital in her own car, following the stabbing incident, which took place at 902 Fayetteville St., better known as "Fayetteville Crossing," because it is only a few yards from railroad tracks.

This house is rented by Miss Anna Laura Everett and Johnny Atkins.

The woman who stabbed Atwater stands 5 feet, seven inches. (See ATWATER SLAIN, P. 2)

A Welcomed Change

The unfortunate circumstances surrounding the proposed pay hike for Jesse O. Sanderson, superintendent of Raleigh Public Schools, and his two assistants by the Board of Education, serves one germane purpose in pointing up the need to have an accepted yardstick to determine salaries for public officials. A page from Armed Forces regulations would have served well in preventing the error of pay-raising the man instead of the position he holds. There is certainly little belief in the assertion that the local superintendent is the best in the state. Certainly, this belief is not shared by few, if any, Negroes in and around the Raleigh area.

The announcement by the superintendent in Tuesday's evening Times here of his intended resignation is certainly welcomed news by Negroes and many white persons in Raleigh. The board should immediately accept the resignation and look to a new day in the future when the schools will be returned to the people. For two decades, Raleigh's school system has been noticeably administered by a man who built an image of individualism which far superseded the office.

There has been no question about the board of today and boards of the past 20 years having explicit confidence in Mr. Sanderson. However, we believe, the boards of tomorrow will envision a need to cater more to the patrons of the schools than the superintendent or his office. Entrenchment through tenure may be outmoded. In a changing world it will be well to designate a rotation of superintendents after eight to twelve years. In this way, no man could look beyond a given time in so important a position. On the other hand, the office and people would enjoy change and new concepts.

Mr. Sanderson has certainly relieved the situation here through stepping down. The Board of Education inadvertently, through attempting to award the administration of the Raleigh schools with pay increases, contributed to an earlier change of superintendent than Raleigh would have otherwise experienced. In any event, it is our opinion that all concerned will reap the benefits of the superintendent's resignation.

The Last Fourth

It is understandable that each looks after his own. This is clearly brought out in the matter of the beltline or rather the 3/4 which has been completed. The one-fourth which still remains a mystery as to where it may begin would affect some 700 families in Biltmore Hills, Garner, Caraleigh or South and East Raleigh, the step-children of Raleigh.

However, the other side of the story is that Federal funds have been used and will be used to complete this project. So when those who look after their own interests don't realize the need to function in behalf of all, it is then time to seek other alternatives.

Should the Bureau of Roads, which has say-so over Federal funds, find biasness in the use of funds allocated for a project, it is our understanding that all federal funds will be held up on projects involving roads in an entire district. This could happen in North Carolina. Certainly, it seems past time to complete the last leg of the beltline in view of the great demand for its use in a fastly expanding city without having Federal intervention.
