Y. E. S. hopes to provide a new king of program tailored to fit the needs of the community. Although the Raleigh project is one of seventhroughout the state, Jean Allen, the director of the project, and her co-workers plan to meet the particular needs of Chavis Heights and Method. Instead of imposing it's will on the community, this program will be run as much as possible by the community itself. Jean and her co-workers would like to hear the suggestions of anyone in the community. Any assistance from CAROLINIAN readers would be appreciated. Y. E. S. hopes to provide tutors for at least 100 children. The program will concentrate its efforts on children in grades five through nine, who are under achievers. These are children whose performance in school is not up to their capabilities, and math will be offered, but tutoring will not be confined to the academic side. A program of experiencing - broadening will be organized. This will include trips to various places around the city.

Recruitment of both tutors and tutees is now underway. Y. E. S. would welcome information from CAROLINIAN readers about children needing tutoring or high school students willing to tutor. The telephone number for Y. E. S. is available from Information under Youth Educational Services, Summer Project: Raleigh.

Atwater was also a dropout during his junior year at Ligon Jr.-Sr. High School.

Miss White was formally charged with murder Sunday. She was held in jail without bond, until the probable cause hearing in City Court Monday, where she was released under bond for a later appearance in Superior Court.

Both Atwater and Miss White had previous records of arrests. He was first charged on June 4, 1962 with armed robbery, sentenced to two years on the roads, suspended on condition he remain of good behavior for a period of 3 years and pay costs of court; on November 11, 1964, he again appeared before City Court Judge Pretlow Winborne, charged with carrying a concealed weapon, no driver's license, and no liability insurance. The outcome of this case was not a part of police records. On October 2, 1965, young Atwater was charged with assault with a deadly weapon, and damage to property. He was found guilty on October 5, 1965. His final arrest came on October 11, of the same year, when he faced a damage to property rap. For this, he received a six-months suspended sentenced, and was ordered to pay costs of court. Miss White was nabbed on September 9, 1962 and charged with breaking, entering and larceny. She was sentenced to serve one year in Women's Prison on October 10, 1962. Funeral services for Atwater were conducted Wednesday at 4 p. m. at St. James AME Church, Method, with the Rev. J. N. Sheares, pastor, officiatthe college to meet the cost of ing, and interment was made at

Highway Cop

"Shortly after I pulled off the road, he came over, inquiring, with an apparent angered and enraged voice, saying, 'Boy, I told you to keep straight!' Don't you know that you're supposed to obey a patrolman when he tells you to do something? A patrolman has more authority than a traf-

He said Patrolman Allenthen grabbed his belt from behind and ordered Watson to go over to his automobile and get into it. "I was worried about what would happen to my car as he husseled me across the street," stated Mr. Watson. He said, at the time, his feelings were of humilation and anger.

The complaint told a completely startled managing editor: "He harshly ordered me into the car with a git instead of get."
"I hesitated with great effort, and asked him again what would happen to my car. I have valuables in there." Allen allegedly replied, "We'll take of your car." Then, according to Mr. Watson, the cop began acting with more "At that moment, I fiercely opposed his force techniques.
